Came across this a few mins ago, found it rather cool. Thought I would share.

I think the final concept of sea bed bases and depots is a rather scary reality which likely already exists.

The concept of the tunnel system to the land locked locations, well first that is a reality, its known especially in the US, but makes you really consider the engineering required for these tunnels, being we have the tectonic plates to consider as they shift around especially in the Western north american continent.

That was very cool, and interesting to watch.

Kinda crazy to think about a submarine base I Nevada. And China...

Mind fuck given that it's alot of 70s info.
Gawd know what they got going on now.

Surely was an interesting watch, however the editing really annoyed me. Zooming in, out, in out, other side of the map, zoom in, out. Honestly, this distracted me so much I couldn't fully follow what he said.
