Thread: Prediction: BAT will be \$1+ by mid-November

Kill Joy - August 4, 2017, 5:37 pm

My prediction: Basic Attention Token (BAT) will be $1+ by sometime in November, 2017.

Price as of post: $0.14

Update: Mercury set to release October 6th -

<https://basicattentiontoken.org/bat-mercury-pre-launch-technical-update/>

I have moved my prediction back 1 month due to the delay of Mercury, which was not seen coming.

Reasons

Team (to highlight a few):Brendan Eich - Creator of Javascript, co-founded Mozilla & Firefox.

Brian Bondy - Worked extensively on Mozilla, Khan Academy, and Evernote.

Greg Badros - Previously Vice President of Engineering & Products at Facebook; Sr. Director of Engineering at Google.

Yan Zhu - Worked extensively on Tor, Yahoo, and HTTPS Everywhere.

Ankur Nandwani - Product Manager at Coinbase.

Those people combined are one of the most impressive teams I have seen in the crypto world. Strong and already developed leaders in technology and innovation are a good drive for development in new technology

Web Browser Development

Basic Attention Token already has a product. The Brave browser is an already functioning web browser on which the BAT platform is being developed on. A personal opinion, I think this is a pretty decent browser and recommend people to try it out. BAT is not going to remain solely on the Brave browser. After successful implementation on Brave, they plan on rolling out to other browsers via default options or extensions/plugins. A chrome extension is already planned and with Brendan Eich's relationship with Mozilla & Firefox, we can assume BAT will be a feature on it in the future as well.

Over 150 publishers have joined Brave Payments already. Wikihow, Archive.org, and Smashing Magazine have given BAT approval to use their names. Other large name publishers will also be added.

Relationships

With an already experienced team, we can note that these people already having standing relationships with companies they have worked in and around. I have already talked about Brendan Eich's relationship with Mozilla & Firefox.

Greg Badros has worked in high positions with Google and Facebook, so we can assume he has connections to them and elsewhere because of those positions. Now we can assume that Facebook and Google more than likely won't work with a competing product/company, but those connections are great to have regardless.

Already noted before, Ankur Nandwani is Product Manager at Coinbase where he manages the consumer division of the company. Prior to that he co-founded BitMonet, which was the Bitcoin-based monetization platform for content publisher. A relationship with Coinbase? A very good one to have and something that I will talk about next...

Potential Partner

UPDATE: Partner was announced and it is Uphold! Honestly a better choice since Coinbase has its major downfalls.

<https://basicattentiontoken.org/uphold-to-support-braves-basic-attention-token-the-new-utility-token-for-blockchain-based-digital-advertising/>

Continuing on from Relationships... Ankur Nandwani. Remember that Ankur Nandwani is the Product Manager for Coinbase.

BAT has already partnered with a company that will help with the conversion of BAT to fiat such as USD, EUR, GBP, etc. Detail's of that will be announced very soon. Now what company supports conversion of crypto assets to fiat, particularly USD, EUR, and GBP? Coinbase, which is one of the most popular places to buy/sell top digital assets. What company has announced they plan on supporting more crypto currencies in 2017? Coinbase, as said by founder Brian Armstrong.

We are in the middle of the 3rd quarter now and so far this year Coinbase has added support for only Litecoin, probably due to the creator of Litecoin's heavy work and involvement with Coinbase. With end of the year fast approaching, I think BAT is the most viable candidate for Coinbase's next digital currency.

The plan to integrate a system to convert BAT/Fiat is scheduled for mid-September. I'll give them some delay and some time for media to attract even more attention.

These are my reasons for my prediction that BAT will be valued at $1+ come mid-November.

Looks promising but we'll have to see if there's a demand as it has low circulation at the moment. How much do you have in it if you've invested in it?

BAT from the user-growth pool of 300 million (for BAT payments, not the ICO BAT tokens) that is untouched for 6 months will be re-distributed back into the user-growth pool.

I am currently holding 85,311 BAT and hope to make that number 100,000 soon. I tried to be unbiased in my prediction by presenting factual information.

DeadKube - August 4, 2017, 5:49 pm

That's more than a 7 fold increase in less than two months. I honestly doubt it but I applaud your optimism. Thank you for the share.

That would be some good gains within a couple months, good luck to you OP. You have a decent holding in BAT.

Hmm I didn't even mention already committed publishers. I'll add that in soon.

Buy bitcoin with PayPal in the currency exchange section then put your BTC onto a exchange such as Bittrex or Poloniex and buy BAT with your BTC.

It's simple, whales dump their bat when it reaches a higher price then buy back, look at the chart it's been happening for months.

Whales own so much of this coin during lco 1 eth was like 7000 bat.

100 million is already a high enough market cap this isn't unique either.

Competing tokens launch unforeseen updates that are better than BAT.

Ethereum network concerns or instability.

Aqua_fina - August 6, 2017, 11:41 am

BAT is dead. Are you aware that BAT only has $3m volume per day? Yes, that's less than HALF of Sia's volume. It is 1/5th of Stratis volume, and those coins are already considered to have low volume Asian investors aren't interested in BAT at all. The only big exchange that has it is Bittrex and it is ranked number 24 there between their coins..

Also, lets not forget that the top 5 BAT addresses own over 60% of all the BATs. Can you just imagine that only 5 addresses have over 60% of all BAT tokens?

$1 for each BAT is unrealistic based on its severely low volume & severely low market interest. You can only hope for $0.25-$0.50 per BAT by the end of this year, and that price increase wouldn't be from BAT's success. It would most likely be due to bitcoin's increase in price.

You shouldn't take anyone's opinion. Just do your own research.

At the least, if you want to hear other people's opinion try reading at least 100 different ones, go through reddit & bitcointalk & you'll see how much this token is a joke.

You're better off keeping your money in bitcoin than putting it in BAT. The price of BAT in BTC have been going down, the title of this thread is misleading. He uses dollars, no one uses dollars in cryptocurrency

All exchanges use bitcoin. The only reason "BAT increased in price" is because bitcoin went up.

For example:

if one bat is worth 0.00005 BTC which is $0.15 (And BTC was $2000 here)

And then BTC goes to $3000

Then your BAT would be worth $0.225 (even though it still at 0.00005 BTC in exchanges)

Why? Because bitcoin went up, not because BAT went up..

Don't fall for this token. There are dozens that are way better. In fact, keeping your coins in BTC is more safe investment than putting it in BAT. What would happen if bittrex decides to remove this coin out of their exchanges? It will completely die. Because all its volume is dependent on one exchange, no one is really interested in it.

DO YOUR RESEARCH.

As for BTC's price increase, yes BAT has increased with it as with most other alts.

Quote:Do you know what will happen if bittrex decides (for whatever reason) to remove BAT? The coin will permanently die.

I'm not sure we will see it die just from it be de-listed from one exchange.

The partner (likely coinbase) that is exchanging BAT to Fiat via integrated browser in Brave will keep it well alive until that for whatever reason goes away (unlikely to happen) and in turn BAT will go away only to be replaced by the next viable option.

Just because your BAT investment became a big loss, no need to pull other members with you. For members that are interested how much Kill Joy lost, go look through his posts back when BAT was added to bittrex (Shouldn't take more than 2 minutes to find it) & see how much he paid for his coins & how much they are worth now.

I explained it here, but I guess math is too hard for you? Also the title of this thread is misleading, which is also explained in the comment linked above

Re-read it again using a calculator

You're just using the fact that bitcoin is going up in value & trying to make it look like BAT is the one increasing. How about you write the bitcoin price instead? This way users will know if the coin went up or no when they come back to this thread.

I agree partly with your statements on the previous page. It is possible Bittrex will delete the coin and it will vanish, or some big amount owners will cash out and the coin will crash. But there is also a good chance for the coin to grow, because of the development team and the stage the coin is at. I think it is smart to invest a little bit for the long term just to see where it goes.

Could somebody explain to me why we need BAT?

I understand that advertisers pay for advertisements with BAT, most of this goes to the publisher of the content, some goes to the Brave developers and some goes to the end users. However I don't understand why this can't be accomplished with Bitcoin.

You could argue that Bitcoin transaction fees would make the whole thing too expensive, but don't forget that the Lightning Network is coming soon (and that sending Ethereum tokens still has a transaction fee).

Alright so it looks like Coinbase may not be the partner! The next two closest things are GDAX and Gemini. Since GDAX is already owned by Coinbase, maybe we can assume that it is also out of the picture.

Only time will tell.

Hey, don't freak out over price fluctuations over early stages of a solid project. If you believe in the tech, the team, the development, you should sleep sound knowing that you're investing into something good. That's what keeps me strong. I invest in opportunities and things like this. If I can't sleep because I'm too worried about my investments, then I shouldn't be investing at all.

If you are using MEW or another ETH wallet that supports ERC20 coins you can just sent it to your ETH address and it will appear in the same wallet.

It depends on what coin you currently have. Often the prices are comparable so both of them are as cheap/expensive. In most cases the BTC market has more volume, which makes it easier to quickly buy and sell your coins if needed. So if you can choose, I would suggest to use BTC since it is more convenient.

Doesn't matter which you choose. On the BTC-BAT market you trade Bitcoin and BAT. On the ETH-BAT market you trade Ethereum and BAT. Choose BTC if you have BTC and choose ETH if you have ETH.

Local Bitcoins is amazing , I'm sure you can find someone near you to exchange real life cash with you. Just make sure their ratings are good of course and also make sure they've had completed deals recently that went well. If it's a 2012 account with 500+ completed deals and they haven't dealt since 2012 , that should be a big red flag.

Over 150 publishers have joined Brave Payments already. Wikihow, Archive.org, and Smashing Magazine have given BAT approval to use their names. Other large name publishers will also be added.

Relationships

With an already experienced team, we can note that these people already having standing relationships with companies they have worked in and around. I have already talked about Brendan Eich's relationship with Mozilla & Firefox.

Greg Badros has worked in high positions with Google and Facebook, so we can assume he has connections to them and elsewhere because of those positions. Now we can assume that Facebook and Google more than likely won't work with a competing product/company, but those connections are great to have regardless.

Already noted before, Ankur Nandwani is Product Manager at Coinbase where he manages the consumer division of the company. Prior to that he co-founded BitMonet, which was the Bitcoin-based monetization platform for content publisher. A relationship with Coinbase? A very good one to have and something that I will talk about next...

Potential Partner

UPDATE: Partner was announced and it is Uphold! Honestly a better choice since Coinbase has its major downfalls.

<https://basicattentiontoken.org/uphold-to-support-braves-basic-attention-token-the-new-utility-token-for-blockchain-based-digital-advertising/>

Continuing on from Relationships... Ankur Nandwani. Remember that Ankur Nandwani is the Product Manager for Coinbase.

BAT has already partnered with a company that will help with the conversion of BAT to fiat such as USD, EUR, GBP, etc. Detail's of that will be announced very soon. Now what company supports conversion of crypto assets to fiat, particularly USD, EUR, and GBP? Coinbase, which is one of the most popular places to buy/sell top digital assets. What company has announced they plan on supporting more crypto currencies in 2017? Coinbase, as said by founder Brian Armstrong.

We are in the middle of the 3rd quarter now and so far this year Coinbase has added support for only Litecoin, probably due to the creator of Litecoin's heavy work and involvement with Coinbase. With end of the year fast approaching, I think BAT is the most viable candidate for Coinbase's next digital currency.

The plan to integrate a system to convert BAT/Fiat is scheduled for mid-September. I'll give them some delay and some time for media to attract even more attention.

These are my reasons for my prediction that BAT will be valued at $1+ come mid-October. Maybe you wanna read the thread? ?

Techos love to speculate coins that have tech applicability, and although not wrong in their reasons you have to consider a very important factor; the real life benefit of the coin not just for the technology proficient but the masses. It came from techos but now every day people who have no understanding of blockchain technology are recognising this benefit, and ultimately it will be the coins the support everyday people will be the one to take charge within the market. Thanks for bringing BAT to my attention. I have heard of it but did not know how promising it was. I have a quick question I have been confused about since I have been looking into trading cryptos.. How do they base a price of a coin off the price of BTC? For example, BAT is valued at 5975 satoshi as I post this, would that not directly correlate it to BTC price?

EDIT: NVM I kind of get it now lol. It just uses it as a reference, same with ETH.

Considering on/in most exchanges you can only purchase BAT with BTC (not sure you can purchase with USD yet) - can be viewed here:

<https://coinmarketcap.com/assets/basic-attention-token/#markets> - the price directly correlates with BTC because you have to purchase it with BTC. That being said, you can then try and correlate BTC with the USD (or w/e currency you use).

So yes, it's based off of BTC considering you're indeed purchasing it with BTC. The dollar amount you see is correlation to the current Bitcoin (or Ethereum/whatever) price.

BAT might be stabilize for a few hours between 6000-6500 satoshi while making very volatile moves in between, there was just a 7BTC sell wall until the 0.786 fib level but people have been making sell orders (as have I).

BAT for me has been a blissh when it comes to the 0.618 - 0.786 fib level, really volatile moving from 6000-6500 satoshi and profit can be made by buying low (6000-6150 satoshi) and selling high (~6500 satoshi).

Take a note that I'm no professional whatsoever, just getting started, point out if you see any flaw.

And I bought it back in June and didn't make a thread about it and sold just now to rebuy after a dip. Also, me posting to "buy it now," isn't going to make much of a difference; it requires a massive amount of volume and much more than what users on HF have Okay, so I from what I understand, they will heavily rely on user attention for the ad's to basically value the coin. The coin's value is derived by the brave browser which serves extremely beneficial to both advertisers and publishers. The idea is innovative yet it lacks explanation on how the user base will grow. Sorry to butt in and give me unwanted opinion.

Like it's cool and gadgety but i really don't see these innovations being anything grand or revolutionary. It's the grand ones that spark cognitive interest in prospective investors and end users, this seems very long sighted before it gains any sustainable real attention from both market and users.

Not that it isn't a good idea, but before crypto actual spills out onto physical usable world a lot more critical developments must be made amongst the community for the 'masses'.

I'm no tech junkie so my opinions probably next to shit, but a standard economic inquiry must be made in order to actually foresee the future of both this coin and block chain in general.

How is it not a grand idea? They are completely changing the advertising platform. As an advertiser, I know my ads are targeted, as in seen by relevant (interested people) who would actually click on the ad instead of HOPING for a click from anyone on Facebook or google. As a regular user I can be paid to see quality ads, or if I enjoy content from a website so much I may donate let's say $5 because I appreciate not seeing ads.

100 million BAT is in circulation. By the looks of it, it's gonna go up in prize. How will it be affected by the UGP? I don't think it's farfetched to say that BAT will lose value when they put the UGP to use, since it will be easy to aquire BAT from the new pool. Am I wrong here?

Market cap is irrelevant to my question. If there are more BAT in circulation than most other coins that means there are more of them out there which means each one is inherently worth less due to their being more of a supply than demand. It's like BTC, it's worth a bunch because there's much fewer and there's a cap on how many there will ever be. By your logic Ripple is one of the best coins when general consensus is it's shit.

If there are more BAT in circulation than most other coins that means there are more of them out there which means each one is inherently worth less due to their being more of a supply than demand. It's like BTC, it's worth a bunch because there's much fewer and there's a cap on how many there will ever be. By your logic Ripple is one of the best coins when general consensus is it's shit.

Number of coins means nothing when it comes to profit or even growth potential as long as you can send decimals.

Currently if you want to advertise on Adsense you must go through Google and they take a percentage of the ad revenue you pay as an advertiser which under BAT could go directly to the publisher. Adsense revenue is in the billions annually.

This blockchain technology could be a good fit to remove the middle-man.

I'm reading the whitepaper now. Looks like an excellent team. There is low-trade volume but I consider that a plus since the price has been fairly stable and I would assume higher volume would mean a higher price due to demand.

Quote:Do you know what will happen if bittrex decides (for whatever reason) to remove BAT? Isn't that sort of true for all ERC20 tokens right now? And what happens if Polo lists BAT?

Well BCC would replace BTC as the main currency for buying and trading alt-coins, so there would be a period of instability as BTC is devalued and BCC is valued higher. Plus you would see it straight away when coins get listed for BCC. :-)

My thoughts exactly now. Interested the rise was happening before the announcement and I didn't even hear a peep of rumors about the exact date of when it was going to be added.

If you're looking for a long-term investment, any price right now is a good one. If you're looking to make a quick buck, wait for a dip to at least .25.

Now taking tips, thanks. Just kidding.

Glad to see everyone is making some money. Be careful as not all ICOs or coins will always be a good investment. Study the tech, is it new or the same old shit? Does the development team have experience with a proven track record? Have they already delivered a working product? Those are 3 keys things to look at in ICOs.

Completely agree. The biggest selling point when I have been investing in these are the working product.

The Brave browser already as a TON of adoption so without a doubt if they get their Attention algorithm figured out this will be an extremely active token.

Hi,

I bought a few hours ago ~270$ of BAT.

Logical answer to your questions is 'huge price increase'. I did my research for this coin. If you get in now, you are actually getting in a pre-pump. The actual pump will happen when dev-team releases the first browser extension, as normal users are more likely to install an extension than a whole new browser. What happens until that very moment it's a pre-pump. If you get in, BAT should be long-term investment. :)

hellow0rld - September 1, 2017, 3:23 am

It's not a peak. Watch the market history with live data for 10 minutes and you'll understand.

Big holders suppress the price to lower volatility. BAT is long-term.

Although the onyl way I see that happening is if BTC-USDT value depreciates, as opposed to BAT-BTC deteriorating.

For example 25% of your coins at 15% another 25% at 30% and the rest at 50%. When an order triggers you just put a buy order near a support line on the daily chart.

What do you mean BAT has nothing coming up. Have you not read anything about BAT? This month sees the main function use for BAT with a Brave. BAT already has a working product which is already an established company since 2015.

Well I think the tech is good and the product is interesting, but BAT seems like a very non-essential component of the equation. They can easily just do BTC or ETH instead. Don't get me wrong, I got some BAT today, but doesn't it seem like just a fund-raising mechanism?

BAT imo doesn't feel like a network coin like neo, eth, btc but more of an individual company. Don't get me wrong, I think it has potential, just a bit more of a riskier bet than on higher caps edit: I'm quite novice with cryptos, I'm just trying to counter your points to get a better understanding and learn your insight rather than saying 'Oh yeah I agree, tell me more'

Bitcoin cannot be even remotely used for this. BAT is an ERC-20 token and tokens will be recycled from user Wallets after 6 months of inactivity. This keeps a flow of coins instead of losing them.

BAT isn't supposed to be a network coin like NEO and ETH. Those are platforms which can be built and expanded upon. They're not meant for the buying and selling of product either. BAT has a specific usage and that is the sole incentive for the advertising network.

Playing around with anything is risky, especially during price movements. If you know a solid update is coming out very soon, don't play around because you will lose your low position and once the hype starts again you can't buy back in at the low price you had.

It is a technology based on another technology succeeding. A long term bet is good considering the dev team, but not worth it for me.

I don't see people adopting brave browser over other browsers anytime soon.

Got into BAT around .20 cents, holding for the long run. Even though user data is hard to gather with a crypto payment system, I think the people behind this coin are more than experienced and able to perfect it over time.

The Brave browser impressed me when I first used it, and seeing as one of the Co-Founder's of Mozilla Firefox is spearheading BAT and Brave, I think this browser could go a long way--especially for crypto traders and media junkies.

Just picked up 47k BAT at .00004725

I've been a interested BAT since ICO, but only daytraded it when it first went onto bittrex. Since then, the price has been pretty stable around the 4700-5300sats range without any major (talking at least 1.5x) breakout/increase.

With the recent crash, it saw a price decrease of ~13% (5550->4650) and bringing the price to the lower end of the average. I think BTC has hit a pretty good support around $3700 and once it rallies back up, I can see BAT following suit with the mercury update. Whatever happens, I can expect a conservative 10% return short-term.

Fuck me for being invested in OMG at the highest point.

OMG (which i'm heavily invested in) is dipping so fucking hard and BAT is pumping really hard. The worst of two worlds really.
That means you should be buying OMG and not BAT

I just realised you can just multiply the amount of BTC per BAT with how much BTC used to be worth. So before this dip, it was sitting around $4300 for a couple days(0.00006186×4300) meaning it would have been about $0.26 right now which isn't too bad I guess.

The increase in volume will likely see us hold the prices between 6800-7000. I'm not sure if we will break 7000 given that will be a new ATH but even 7000 is a great ROI, especially if you bought in between 4500-5250.

Congrats to everyone who got in on this. Originally got in at 5150, bought another hold at 5500, sold them both at ~6100, bought back in at 6400 and riding to wherever it takes me. ?

5950 is still good! Right now you have a ~500 satoshi profit per coin - nearly a 10% profit, which is decent in itself. I told people in Sakuzi's crypto group that BAT wouldn't hold at its current price point and it would retrace straight back down to 6250:

by sometime in October, 2017.

Price as of post: $0.14

Reasons

Team (to highlight a few):Brendan Eich - Creator of Javascript, co-founded Mozilla & Firefox.

Brian Bondy - Worked extensively on Mozilla, Khan Academy, and Evernote.

Greg Badros - Previously Vice President of Engineering & Products at Facebook; Sr. Director of Engineering at Google.

Yan Zhu - Worked extensively on Tor, Yahoo, and HTTPS Everywhere.

Ankur Nandwani - Product Manager at Coinbase.

Those people people combined are one of the most impressive teams I have seen in the crypto world. Strong and already developed leaders in technology and innovation are a good drive for development in new technology

Web Browser Development

Basic Attention Token already has a product. The Brave browser is an already functioning web browser on which the BAT platform is being developed on. A personal opinion, I think this is a pretty decent browser and recommend people to try it out. BAT is not going to remain solely on the Brave browser. After successful implementation on Brave, they plan on rolling out to other browsers via default options or extensions/plugins. A Chrome extension is already planned and with Brendan Eich's relationship with Mozilla & Firefox, we can assume BAT will be a feature on it in the future as well.

Over 150 publishers have joined Brave Payments already. Wikihow, Archive.org, and Smashing Magazine have given BAT approval to use their names. Other large name publishers will also be added.

Relationships

With an already experienced team, we can note that these people already having standing relationships with companies they have worked in and around. I have already talked about Brendan Eich's relationship with Mozilla & Firefox.

Greg Badros has worked in high positions with Google and Facebook, so we can assume he has connections to them and elsewhere because of those positions. Now we can assume that Facebook and Google more than likely won't work with a competing product/company, but those connections are great to have regardless.

Already noted before, Ankur Nandwani is Product Manager at Coinbase where he manages the consumer division of the company. Prior to that he co-founded BitMonet, which was the Bitcoin-based monetization platform for content publisher. A relationship with Coinbase? A very good one to have and something that I will talk about next...

Potential Partner

UPDATE: Partner was announced and it is Uphold! Honestly a better choice since Coinbase has its major downfalls.

<https://basicattentiontoken.org/uphold-to-support-braves-basic-attention-token-the-new-utility-token-for-blockchain-based-digital-advertising/>

Continuing on from Relationships... Ankur Nandwani. Remember that Ankur Nandwani is the Product Manager for Coinbase.

BAT has already partnered with a company that will help with the conversion of BAT to fiat such as USD, EUR, GBP, etc. Details of that will be announced very soon. Now what company supports conversion of crypto assets to fiat, particularly USD, EUR, and GBP? Coinbase, which is one of the most popular places to buy/sell top digital assets. What company has announced they plan on supporting more crypto currencies in 2017? Coinbase, as said by founder Brian Armstrong.

We are in the middle of the 3rd quarter now and so far this year Coinbase has added support for only Litecoin, probably due to the creator of Litecoin's heavy work and involvement with Coinbase. With end of the year fast approaching, I think BAT is the most viable candidate for Coinbase's next digital currency.

The plan to integrate a system to convert BAT/Fiat is scheduled for mid-September. I'll give them some delay and some time for media to attract even more attention.

These are my reasons for my prediction that BAT will be valued at $1+ come mid-October.

Awesome read bro.
Will look more into it

Chickendipper - September 18, 2017, 12:06 pm

Got my buy order of 6080 in. If you're looking to maximise your profit, just wait a little bit with a lower buy order. BAT has really nice hundred+ satoshi swings, so even on a small dump you will be able to get it.

It still might, I mean if shit coins like Verge can make a 120%+ gain within a few weeks than BAT should have no problems following trend.

I'd be happy to see BAT at $1 by the end of the year.

From Luke-

We are also building the grassroots effort as well (#guerrilla-marketing) is where much of this will take place as we get closer to the Mercury integration launch). More on this as we get closer to Mercury launch. We catch a lot of flak about marketing, but the reality is that if we put that much into public marketing early on it would be perceived as hype driving speculation which would be against what we are working for with the project. The public marketing drive will come, and it will carry the roar of a thousand lions, we are just heads down on getting the integration ready at the moment.

We are also going to be looking for volunteers to test in #test-group-desktop and #test-group-mobile in the near future for a variety of different things for any who are interested. If you join now, you'll be able to see the initial calls for volunteers as they happen. Thanks for the feedback, and for being here as a member of the community.

shilling this dogshit token. Dump it at 6000. It won't reach even 0.50 by early 2018. Mark my words, and don't resort to this. Browser mining is going to take over, hardware will be more advanced and it will be a more sustainable web that way. Not with some shitty no-name browser where you earn pennys to browse. It's called poking and prodding at the type of people in this thread, trying to see what the fuss is. Each of my posts could be completely false on my attitude towards BAT, it doesn't matter. Just trying to see people's arguments for and against.

Funny because OP got triggered. He certainly doesn't appreciate my negativity if he holds 125k BAT ?

$0.50 in 3 months is more realistic but I highly doubt it will happen. It would have better chance if their browser was Mozilla Firefox instead of some unknown browser that no one uses

Nobody uses? There's 500,000-1,000,000 installs on the google play store alone. This doesn't include desktop and iOS: <https://play.google.com/store/apps/details?id=com.brave.browser&hl=en>

Still more than just an "unknown browser." The only way to gauge active BAT holders would be checking how many addresses there are. 19,000+ and increasing about 1000 every 6 days. I'm sure once Mercury launches that number will increase since wallets will be created in Browser.

It's the 6th. The 22nd was never a confirmed date. Mercury roadmap said end of summer.

If it really matters, Mercury is complete. They did not want to release it yet because the quality is not quite where the developers want it and did not want to release something that was not the best they could give us. Read the blog post.

Huge thread, lots of hype!

I remember reading another monster some years ago, it was a company that was pegged to supply some component/material/something for the iPhone. Folk were investing their entire retirements, their kids college funds, etc etc into it and ... naturally it went to all the way down to 0.

With that said I love this project & went in pretty hard, it's gonna be an exciting year!!

BAT was ready to release Mercury on the 22nd like planned; however, Mercury was not at the quality they wanted it to be on release, so they decided to delay it 2 weeks. I think that right there shows that this will more than likely be a successful update.

I think this coin will go really far, but it might take time after this update, hence why I am going to cash out at the peak and then reinvest at a dip about 50% so I can use my other money to invest. Since right now I am all in BAT

Nope, if you really know and trust a product and not invest into hype like most other people do, it is a different situation.

I actually use brave, on phone and desktop and have been a fan for a while. I researched bat team and always look for updates on site and reddit.

Sorry just can't be arsed ahahah Well if you invested $15k at .25, and it doubled, you'd make $15k and .22 is a little less than .25, so I'd say about $19k.

But return of investment (ROI)= Earnings-original investment/original investment

You are right. But people use chrome because it's good, dude if everyone was using brave right now the coin would already be worth heaps.

Thats why now is a good time to invest because it hasn't been adopted yet which creates a room for growth for BAT. Like investing in a company like apple when they hadn't even released anything.

So I want to go about investing in BAT after reading this post and doing some independent research.

I've never invested in cryptocurrencies in general before; what's the best way to go about investing in this specific coin? Is it still worth it?

It is.

You can buy bitcoin from many sites. Coinbase, Gemini, localbitcoins, Uphold.com (official partner of BAT).

You can then send the coins to an exchange like Bittrex to buy them, or send it through shapeshift.io and convert them instantly. Or if you registered on Uphold, you can buy BAT from there too.

You can store them on myetherwallet.com.

Well I mean if you're holding it long, you can do the good till canceled. But what I normally do is just look at trades I like and accept them I never ask for trades I look for it.

But each their own, I feel like the fee is high for good till canceled but benefits are good if you aren't on your computer much.

Yes, you can do good till canceled and it will auto take you out and sell once it reaches your limit.

This is for day trading and people who are offline, but I believe the fees are high.

You can also do stop loss, which will prevent you from losing a lot but that shouldn't matter with this coin for now.

Tbh being a "super focused maniac" is the only way you'll remain at an operating profit. It's a matter of setting a buy/sell point and NOT deviating. I advise those who know they don't have the strength to do so to lock themselves out of sales however you can. For example, not monitoring prices at all and setting a sell order at your high and low point. Make your low point very low though, for example mine are minus 40%. Should never reach that or even close so it is a fine stake.

In general, the cheaper the coin vs ability to rise is where you would side. So for example, if you have $10,000 and expect ETH to hit uhhh $300-350 by xx/xx/xxxx and have BAT hitting $.80 by the same date. The lesser of the two is your best bet and highest odd for a return of profit. That is assuming you're correct in your value at date x. Unless you had bought into Ethereum (for sake of this example) EARLY in the year it would not be nearly as profitable.

Edit: A lot of you'll should stop worrying about the sat price and focus on the actual dollar amount. Reason being I know the vast majority of you'll are NOT going to hold BTC long term so in that case you can, and will short sell your assets and lose out on hella profit. If you bought in while BTC was down, BTC went up and the sat price is still the same, your profit is still there, ignore that shit.

But one thing I don't understand on Bittrex is the conditional buys, so say you want to buy BAT @ .23¢ when it falls, I set the amount to buy at to 0.00005538 BTC, but what if BTCs price changes and 0.00005538 BTC becomes worth .28¢? Are there anyways to counteract this?

Danny, hold my guy, just hold. Unless you're holding lets say 4k BAT and up it isn't worth the $20-80 profit. By the time you lose out on fees, throw off your actual buy point, you'll have fucked yourself. UNLESS you were lucky enough to sell at its very peak, buy at the set low and then held and with only a 2 cent gap, odds are you won't do that.

To my knowledge no, I personally buy via SS now so yea. Bit doesn't account for USD which is why I say stay away from minding the current sat price.

Just to save you from reading all the extra yap here, the date was changed/thrown due to the market in general. That's what happens, you make a prediction, see what happens, and modify. Since this thread was made SEVERAL things happened. I expected $.7 but even that doesn't seem too likely rn.

The BTC crash & rumored date for release being incorrect for example.

@KJ you should make a note in OP if you haven't already on why you changed it

I might be a little bit too bullish on the team but I always get excited when such an amazing team which has succeeded before brings something forward.

It will rise in October, Mercury will surely drive prices up, I can't see this skyrocketing after it hits a new ATH because I can't find a practical use for it besides in the Brave browser, until the team implements it somehow into a mainstream browser (could be years before this happens) I don't see it going past $1.50 anytime soon.

But October and November will be good months.

(Sep 29, 2017 09:15 AM)Dust. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I don't know any market that sells BAT using USDT other than Liqui.

Calculating things in satoshi is better so that you ensure you are not losing the "profit wave" on bitcoin rise either.

If you buy BAT at 4000 satoshi & sell at 3800 satoshi, maybe you are making some profit in USD but guess what? If you had left your coins in BTC then you would've made more money than if you invested in BAT

So it is better to make sure you are not losing your initial investment value, which is in bitcoins. Otherwise you wasted your time

But what if BTC went down? Wouldn't that show profit in satoshis, even if you incurred a loss in USDT?

And ofc I know you cannot get BAT using USDT. I was just saying a coin....any coin to give a hypothetical example.

Caffiene - September 29, 2017, 9:33 am

(Sep 29, 2017 09:29 AM)Dust. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Not necessarily. You can look at charts and history of coins, usually when BTC goes down, alts go down in satoshi too.

BAT for example was 6000 satoshi before the negative south korean news about cryptos.

BTC went from $4200 to $4050, and BAT went down from 6000 satoshi to 5450 satoshi at its lowest yesterday, and stabilized at about 5550 satoshi

If you had bought at 6000 satoshi, you should think/feel you are in loss, unless you sell it at higher than 6000 satoshi.

Also when you use stop-loss, you use them in satoshi as well. For example if you bought BAT at 5000 satoshi, you place your stop loss at 4999 satoshi (so that in case it reaches 4999 satoshi, you automatically have a sell order to ensure you are not at loss) and then you buy it back at a lower price, possible 4500 and that will give u 10% more BAT

This is a BTC market not a USD market. If you make profit in satoshi, you are making "way more" in USD

And if you make/look at your profit in USD, you are possibly losing in a lot of profit potential and limiting your profit view

Thanks for the info, buddy ?

And when XRP quadrupled it had extremely high volume it was 2nd highest coin in volume (it was higher than ethereum even though ethereum had higher market cap) - but thats a different situation because XRP had enough volume to do that well. It had enough good news and enough articles and shilling around the internet for it to go that far. BAT simply doesn't Again, I'm not saying its impossible for it to reach $1, obviously anything is possible. But chances for it to reach $1 by mid-november is probably as high as the chance for you to win a lottery. I don't agree with the author's making such title.

I have BAT, I want it to go up. But let us have safe predictions. You gotta know that trading is all about "Greed vs Fear"

Greed (like this thread) might make you think this coin will go up and will force you to hold it even when it is in a bearish market, all because you are hoping/thinking this coin will hit $1

That is pretty much gambling and wasting all your money until you win the lottery.

DON'T DO THAT

Have reasonable prediction. Hell, if you want to ride the wave AND still be safe, this is what I would recommend you & everyone else in this thread to do:

Wait until this coin reaches 7000 satoshi, and then put a stop-limit sell at 6000 satoshi

Meaning if the coin goes up to 7000 and 8000 satoshi (and you still don't want to sell), then the stop-limit will guarantee that you sell in case it goes back to 6000 satoshi so that you don't end up losing

You can do that or make some kind of strategy, for example: put a stop loss -15% of current market price

If the coin is at 6k satoshi, put a stop loss at 5.1k satoshi

if the coin goes up to 10k satoshi, put a stop loss at 8.5k satoshi and so on.. but don't baghold the coin "doing nothing" and hoping it would reach $1. That would

NOT be trading, it would be pure gambling

This but I can't agree with your last statement, I invest into technology not a token.

I don't see any reason other than the whole team abandoning the coin for it to devalue itself, when I say I invest into the technology I mean I don't really look for trends, patterns, pretty much all types of financial analytics.

My only disagreement is with the growth pace. I think it will grow, and possibly hit $1 in the future. When will that be? Probably somewhere in 2018. I just don't think it will be as early as next month.

Development and roadmap doesn't always impact the coin price positively, we have seen that with Stratis. In fact, Stratis price went down even with the roadmap and great news during Q2/Q3. They even updated their roadmap <https://stratisplatform.com/2017/09/29/stratis-roadmap-update/> and the price went down even further.

So, I agree that BAT will eventually go up, and very possibly hit $1 and more, we both agree on that. But we disagree on how fast it would reach there. Good luck to us

Just want to advice everyone to not sell right now.

It's 5 days left before Mercury release and it was 5 days before 22th September(Expected Mercury release) that the price spiked last time, so hopefully any time now the price will go up to previous price.

What are your thoughts on this?

I don't think BAT will pump after Oct 6. If anything it will dump post-release.

Crypto market has changed drastically; you can no longer buy on news, you need to buy on rumors and sell on news for max profits. Imo it would be best to sell the night of Oct 5 and then rebuy after it dips.

Imao the fact that you said "to take an L" leads me to believe that you're sub-16 years old.

Regardless, i'm not suggesting you sell off your BAT investment permanently. BAT is obviously a solid coin, but if you want max returns you should play the market as such. Mark my words, the coin will dump when Mercury is officially released or soon after. It may not be a large dump, but it will dip regardless. Therefore, if you sell a little before the release, you can rebuy at a lower entry price. By doing so, you will only increase your holdings of BAT.

Any trader that's not a complete imbecile knows this.

Grimeta - October 3, 2017, 10:45 pm

I sold my BAT without profit nor loss, after keeping it for near a month and am glad to have done so because:

1. Too much hype has been created for BAT, and despite everyone only buying before Mercury, price didn't really move.
2. Apparently whales have been stacking BAT since August, so prepare for a huge dump.

My prediction: shortly after Mercury the price will go up to ~8-9k, and then drop back to 6k.

I don't remember honestly, but maybe you are right and I just happen to visit places where it's talked about. Everywhere it's just "buy BAT, Mercury, buy BAT, buy BAT". I'm not long in crypto trading but what I've already learned is not to trust all the shilling, because if you see a coin being shilled so hard - expect it to be dumped hard very soon.

I didn't plan to invest in BAT long term, just wait for the pump, and it seems that that's how most of the buyers feel about it, which could possibly mean a big dump soon, so I exited while still safe.

But that's just me. I'm fairly new so don't take my opinion too seriously.

Why are you guys acting like it's the end of the world? BAT pumped, didn't have the supporting volume, and dumped subsequently. It hit its pre-pump support level of ~5820. BAT still has plenty of momentum to go up and recently saw HUGE spikes in volume (going from 300BTC-1000+BTC in some cases) - good things come to those who wait.

I would feel more confident with 0.50c but that's the very best scenario for me, still would be a great achievement for the coin. Imagine 6 months later it shoots to $10 and we all read back over this.

Some tax rules in certain countries make it better for you to hold your coins aswell. In my country you're supposed to have a news article for every buy and sell you make to prove you're not speculating. If you ARE speculating however get ready to pay 40% taxes.

Other than that TA is not exact science but merely an indicator. I'll have to agree with you once you've been in crypto you'll start to recognize when the market will enter bear trend or not but that stuff takes time and can't be learned on a few days. ?

Volume x10 (compared with BAT)
Price x24 Aprox. (compared with BAT) $24 \times 0.23 = 5.52$

You should compare market cap not price.

Alien8ed - October 5, 2017, 10:34 pm

(Oct 5, 2017 09:46 PM)Dust. Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Price has nothing to do with it. As Snipe said, when you compare between coins, you should compare market cap not price.

When people say "ETH surpass Bitcoin", they don't mean, ETH being over $4500.

They mean ETH having more market cap than BTC. Which is at $760.

If ETH reaches $760, then it is a bigger coin than BTC (assuming BTC market cap doesn't change). Why? $$760 \text{ (ETH price)} \times 94,973,291 \text{ (ETH circulating supply)} = $72 \text{ billion}$, while BTC is less than $72 billion in market cap

Market cap = Circulating coins X price of the coin

Spoiler (Click to View)

$$71,838,537,023 \text{ (BTC's market cap)} = 16,606,150 \text{ BTC (Circulating coins)} \times $4326.02 \text{ (BTC's price)}$

A coin is not "bigger" when it has more circulating supply, and it is also not be bigger when it has higher price either.

It is bigger when it has the bigger number of "multiplication" of both together, which is market cap.

Otherwise we would say that Byteball <https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/byteball/> that this coin is bigger than Monero <https://coinmarketcap.com/currencies/monero/>

But in reality, if you see the marketcap, Monero is 12 times bigger than Byteball

Which is why coinmarketcap lists coin ranks based on marketcap & not based on price <https://coinmarketcap.com/>

Because price alone, or the amount of coins alone, is not enough. The multiplication of both together is what matters. Now the only thing that is missing is the volume. People tend to forget to calculate the volume. The volume is a big indicator to how much the market/people are interested in this coin, it tells you a lot about its daily activity. Usually when a coin has less volume, we are less optimistic about its growth. Why? Because it has less market interest, people are less interested in it.

So that was my initial point, when BAT has way less interest (less volume) compared to QTUM/OMG/Tether/LISK/Zcash/Wave, how can it suddenly surpass them all ? The only way for BAT to reach $1 is if it reaches $1 billion market cap, which will put it above all the coin that I listed. Is it possible? Absolutely. Will it happen? Probably. Just not within a month. I find it hard to believe that BAT will ever have higher market cap than Tether, QTUM or ZCash.

Even if BAT reaches $1, I believe those coins that I mentioned will have grown way more and they will always be higher than BAT. I say that because I believe they are a lot more demanded than BAT. So, if you want my opinion of what could be a good indication that we are closer to the $1, then try to look at those coins. Once those coins reach $1 billion market cap first, then the possibility for BAT to reach $1 will be available.

Hope that helps!

Wow, excellent explanation!

It's obvious that your knowledge on this matter is infinitely greater than mine.?

Usually when a coin has less volume, we are less optimistic about its growth. Why? Because it has less market interest, people are less interested in it.

So that was my initial point, when BAT has way less interest (less volume) compared to QTUM/OMG/Tether/LISK/Zcash/Wave, how can it suddenly surpass them all ? The only way for BAT to reach $1 is if it reaches $1 billion market cap, which will put it above all the coin that I listed. Is it possible? Absolutely. Will it happen? Probably. Just not within a month. I find it hard to believe that BAT will ever have higher market cap than Tether, QTUM or ZCash.

Even if BAT reaches $1, I believe those coins that I mentioned will have grown way more and they will always be higher than BAT. I say that because I believe they are a lot more demanded than BAT. So, if you want my opinion of what could be a good indication that we are closer to the $1, then try to look at those coins. Once those coins reach $1 billion market cap first, then the possibility for BAT to reach $1 will be available.

Hope that helps! Great explanation right here on marketcap of a coin and how one can calculate it

Not saying BAT will fail. But its sad seeing many users here are blindly following the herd without doing enough research. And I don't mean NEWS/FUNDAMENTAL research, I mean TA-wise. Technical analysis.

I wish if every single user spends enough time for their own sake, for their own investment. Stop thinking you are not good enough to do a research. Use google & youtube, try asking around. Never take an advice from a single source, no matter how knowledgeable they may seem to you

With that being said, I have already sold my BAT 2 days ago

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

For the people that say " we are holding long term, we don't care about small dips and weekly crashes "

My response to them = IT. DOESN'T. MATTER. If you are holding long term or short term, it doesn't mean you shouldn't make smart decisions. Sometimes selling at the peak and re-buying at lower price could give you 10% additional coins

If someone on HF made a thread saying " Free $5 if you do X " , dozens of users will flock and gasp to do anything for the $5.... But apparently making 10% profit or 10% additional coins is not good enough. smh

I really hope one day I see most HF users do their own research for their investment, instead of being a sheep and blaming other users. I hate when someone blame me because of a thread or advice I gave. And I really hope no one blames you for that either Kill joy.

You have to learn TA & you have to be able to follow the news closely.

There are 3 main reasons why BAT went down in my opinion (There are many more reasons, but I'll stick to those 3 to make it short)

1- It was holidays for South Korea. And South Korea holds 25% of the bitcoin volume, usually on holiday there is less volume in cryptocurrency from the korean side

<https://www.timeanddate.com/holidays/south-korea/>

Oct 1 Sunday Armed Forces Day Observance

Oct 3 Tuesday Chuseok Holiday National holiday

Oct 3 Tuesday National Foundation Day National holiday

Oct 4 Wednesday Chuseok National holiday

Oct 5 Thursday Chuseok Holiday National holiday

Oct 6 Friday Observed Chuseok National holiday

Oct 9 Monday Hangeul Proclamation Day National holiday

Bitcoin went down a bit during the past couple days & that subsequently made BAT go down as well. Of course, many coins went down as well. BAT wasn't the only coin that was effected

2- Usually everytime devs postpone a planned event for a coin, it usually goes down. BAT postponed their release, it was supposed to be 6 October, they postponed the live version for few more days <https://twitter.com/AttentionToken/status/915756722420985856> Naturally, that causes the price of the coin also to go down. The moment you see them postponing such news, you should sell it before anyone else does. This way you can sell it at a high price.

So keep yourself updated about your coin. Follow their twitter, reddit, forums, google its news, and so on..

Thats a 15 minutes candlesticks, you can see the moment they posted that tweet, the market went down 7% instantly and kept going down until its current price, making it go down to a total of 9.4% right after the tweet. You had about 15 minutes to sell your coin after their tweet, so if you were following them or had a tweet notifier, you would've been aware and given yourself additional 9% BAT tokens. If you want to be a smart investor, you should do your homework properly. Yes, those little details effect the market.

Also in case anyone is curious or want to make sure about the link between the market falling & the tweet, you can easily look at the dates & times. See the date & time of the twitter post and compare that with the market going down from 5850 satoshi. The time of the twitter post was 5 October 2017 - 3:53 AM UTC. The BAT market took a hit at 5 October 2017 - 4 AM UTC

<https://twitter.com/AttentionToken/status/915756722420985856>

3- Technical analysis:

See the green & red line (the ones that are forming a triangle), the candlesticks were supposed to go between them and stay in that zone.

If the candlesticks go below the green line, it means a bearish market. By going below the green line it means it will go down & continue to go down. Because it broke the trend.

If the candlesticks go above the red line, it means a bullish market. By going above the red line it means it will go up & continue to go up. Because it broke the trend.

So again, you gotta keep your eyes on your coin and its news & surrounding events if you want to sell it at good price before a crash/dip.

Another important thing I need to say is try to use stop-limit as much as possible. It will save you A LOT.

If the coin is for example at 6500 satoshi, put stop-limit at 5999, so that if it goes to 5999, you automatically sell your coins, and then you re-buy it at lower price. Usually if it goes below those "round-up" numbers, it will go way lower.

Like if it goes below 6000, expect it to go down 5% more the same for below 5000
& below 4000 and so on

That's the most simple "support level" you can learn.

So here is my recommendation for you, myself & everyone: Practice risk management. Before investing in any coin make sure you know when to exit it in case things don't go as planned. Expect the worst and be prepared for them using tools such as stop-limit.

HODL is not a smart strategy, because no coin is loyal to your profits. HODL may work & may not. So prepare yourself for the worst. Be in control of your own funds, don't let the market control your net worth.

So to clarify, you have a personal grudge against OP over a prediction thread on a cryptocurrency that's solely based on adaptation and speculation?

That sucks for the new users, they should learn to read.

To clarify, I am a believer & big holder of BAT. In fact, I use brave browser as much as I can. But we can not have unrealistic predictions. Unfortunately, many users in this thread are "seriously" believing it will hit $1 by mid-November, I got few PMs today about whether that prediction is possible. And I just want to make my answer publicly = " Anything is possible, but chances for it to hit $1 is almost impossible. I don't think it will hit $1 in November or December either "

Thanks

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5727512> - if any of us are to judge your credibility and intelligence in predicting coins and analyzing their graphs, then your track record certainly doesn't help you one bit.

You are sitting there liping off and saying there is no way it's going to hit $1 in a month or two, but in the general scope of things, a coin with a solid team and dev support going 4-5 x is not an uncommon occurrence in crypto. It's actually super common.

So one has to ask, what is your problem? You obviously don't have any scientific credibility in graphs and analysis. You suck at predicting coins from your gut, as referenced in your Qtum thread, and you haven't presented any concrete or rational thought why this coin SHOULDN'T go up 4-5x in the next month or two, so it would seem you are talking out of your anal cavity.

How about you stop getting so emotional and learn how to look at things objectively? Put on your big boy pants and grow up, just a little bit. If you're going to FUD a coin, learn how to present a mature and credible argument.

If your shitty prediction record is anything to go by, it would make sense to do the exact opposite of what you preach in general and turn some profits.

So buckle up sunshine, and buy some BAT. Or go sell and let us buy some more cheap BAT.

Through his paid group you can make anywhere from 10-100% on his calls on a given day if we're being honest. No you're not going to make 100% each day, but minimum if you follow his calls you can make 10%, that's a guarantee. When you start making the 30% is when you become a student of his and he teaches you his techniques in his calls he makes. The percentage of trading is completely up to you by how many trades you make. I make anywhere from 2-3% a trade, so you do the math. 15 trades in a day is very do-able.

KillJoy isn't dumb, neither are we ?

I am a student of bull aswell and yes I do earn up to 30-40% profit a day. You have to know tho that I am not earning 40% on a coin. I am earning 3-8% per trade. If you add this up it comes down to 30-40%. Also you can not just turn 5k into 13million because I often trade with low quantity/volume coins where you can not just simply drop in a million and make that 5% profit. Some coins simply do not allow you to put more than 0.5BTC in it for a trade. Also Bull brought me to the point where I do not need his calls I do them on my own and take profit. I find coins analyze and trade all by myself. Bull just simply thought me how to do it.

Coin won't reach $1 anytime soon for the simple fact that there's a billion supply circulating supply not to mention the total supply is 1.5 billion. If the supply wasn't so high it could have a higher chance. Also the only high volume exchange for b.a.t is bittrex. Better off investing in something else imho. Sold all my b.a.t a while back and don't regret it a single bit. A lot of people in the crypto section are trying to become like grizzlies predicting prices for coins and everybody hops on the bandwagon. I'll admit kill joy knows his stuff about crypto but i disagree with his prediction of the coin reaching $1 anytime soon. Invest in this if you want but imho i don't see this reaching $1 simply because of the huge supply. If it does end up reaching $1 it'll be in like a couple years not anytime soon so there are definitely better alternatives. Another thing is that i remember that there are a couple of people who control majority of the supply who bought at ico price so they could keep on selling small amounts everyday and they'd be making profit while price would go up then go right back down. I was right about stratis not reaching $10 before October and there were people arguing with me about that and i ended up being right and i'll be right with this prediction as well.

Be pretty lazy research if that was the case.

For anyone looking for the release date, AFAIK with the news I've read about there is currently no date, there was the 6th but that was cancelled, people saying the 13th of October is also incorrect, but I think they're possibly saying a new release date soon, or they're still unsure.

The current BAT price is 0.19 and we all know that the team and the idea behind this project is just fantastic.

I want to thank Kill Joy for this post because I have learned a lot from this case, and, I haven't lost

Sorry for the grammar mistakes, English is not even my second language. Pump and dump groups are the cause, it isn't hard to have stuff like this happen and it can happen to any cheap coin, they do it so then others start buying in because they see it's growing so fast, and start selling it off while people blindly keep buying and more suckers are left with a useless coin. No, not any coin. What you need to understand is market cap. BAT marketcap is 184 millions, while Parkbyte's was 1.5mil.

For bat to go 3x in price someone would have to pump over 500 millions USD. Parkbyte's market cap was around 1.5mil, so all it needed was 5mil pump (one rich guy can easily do that).

Currently at 18c and showing no forms of pull back on the MACD, i believe BTC will hit $5500 within the next 12 hours or less even 8 and BAT will bleed even more i think we could see this coin get down to to the low 15c. Don't take my judgment on that but it will drop further down in price that's for sure. So if your thinking about buying this coin it's already very cheap but if you want to get better value for money wait until it get to the mid (16s-15s) depends what price you got in at, personally i bought into bat for long term. Basically my whole portfolio is long term, however i'm moving into day trades because i see more value for money and it's more fun. Personally it depends when you bought in because i bought in @22c $1300 worth i don't really want to sell for a loss when i know it's just going to rise up again. If i was on top of it and was day trading i would have done some analysis and sold before it got so low, but i'm not its long term just letting it sit. The market gained way to fast, couldn't sustain it, so everyone jumped off the hype. BAT will not make it big, gonna stay around $0.15 - $0.25. Max I ever see it going is $0.30.

(I hope I'm wrong tbh, but odds are, it will never break $0.30, so there goes any chance of myself making profit.)

BAT was at 6000+ satoshi at 5 october waiting for the mercury release that was supposed to break the 6500 barrier but instead of releasing the updated the dev team decided to postpone it once again which was a big mistake in my opinion because no one really cares how well the code is written since there are barely any people using the brave browser. So if they had released the update BAT was going to break 6500 satoshi instead they decided to postpone it and BAT crashed. Two options here: bat team is a bunch of idiots who don't know what they are doing or this was done intentionally.

I don't know, sorry. Money is currently flowing in other coins because exciting news comes out, BAT has no exciting news going for them so the price is going down. If Brave makes a statement about them being implemented in x browser the price will go to the moon, that's the reason I'm not selling. But don't expect that shit anytime soon.

Ethereum: hard fork hype

Bitcoin: bitcoin gold hype

XLM: swift hype

chainlink: swift hype

ripple: swift hype

litecoin: lightning network and generally following btc trend bch: miners switch for profit dash: I don't know, I don't like dash.

NEM: general uptrend (watch tradingview)

Monero: recovering from dip (120 to 80, now back in the uptrend)

NEO: redpulse ICO refunds are now all sold and fear is gone

OMG: recovering from dip

qtum: hype, got added to bitfinex aswell

stratis: going down because of bad attitude by devs steem: it is what it is, nothing special

Pivx: despite the zPiv protocol being released the price went down, probably because it was announced long before, kinda similar to what happend to BAT wallet implementation

Truth is the latest BAT update didn't provide any value for the token, it just implemented it into the browser and that's it. Future updates should change that, hopefully.

Quote:The team is not focused on the short term price. When nearly every coin is moving, it is other forces at play.

There isn't a magic wand we can yield to make the price move with the upcoming fork. Tweets, marketing effort, etc would not swing. We have our co-founder/CTO as a judge, and a team of engineers participating at ETHWaterloo this weekend.

We are not freaked about other short term woes of the press and speculators over hiring ETH devs either, we are cross training our engineers, directly engaging with other projects and have our CTO alongside Vitalik and other judges. We are not scared. We are engaged and building on nearly every level: platform, product, community, business. It takes time, and we are putting time in where we need to in order to build a viable and lasting product that we can mainstream. If it were fast or easy, everyone would do it. It isn't. We like to solve difficult problems.

We are focused on building a good platform for token utility, which is the ultimate objective. The team does not let price swings impact or alter project goals or priority.

I realize this does not sit well with a lot of short term investors and speculators, but this has been the ongoing position from the project from the beginning. Source:

Mostly because

A: Profit (I've been daytrading it literally everyday lmao)

B: Kids expect to become millionaires overnight, and then get mad when a prediction thread that was literally revolved around a postponed release of the project doesn't come true.

I still think BAT is a good investment and I may jump back in at some point.

The ICO market is nearly dead.

Glad to hear you made some money. :) I do agree that all of these ICOs are overkill. The market is very saturated and truly useful and unique technology are hard to come by. I have always stuck to the cream of the crop coins (BTC, ETH, XMR, LTC) and only have ventured into alts twice for serious investing. Everything else just seems like a sad joke. I'll stick to Ethereum. You know I love it.

I can vouch for that, Bull only does what benefits him. I was given a free spot in his group, which is exactly why I should have expected nothing more than to be neglected. I followed his BCC call, was told to by under 0.14 BTC/BCC. I got 3 coins at 0.133 BTC each and was told to take a minor loss and put sell offer at 0.125 and that it would "sell".

BCC is down to 0.056 at the time of posting, which puts me right around a $900 loss . I also followed his free call on Dopecoin where I was told to hold it until the 30th of September with no stop loss. I bought 12k DOPE which at the time was 0.125~ BTC, the same amount today is only worth 0.054 BTC.

Yeah I will send a pm immediately to the devs so they can issue an instant apology that the coin didn't make you 10,000% profit in 60 seconds. We poor mortals forget that you are used to making 1 million per night because you use ebooks on here so this waiting for a few weeks to make profit must seem like AGONY.

Or you can just chop your nuts off and learn how to hold for a month or two and buy low and sell high instead of moaning about 'nothing' like you know what you are talking about.

I bet you're one of the million little kids on here that bought BAT without even reading the white paper. You just wanted to make 10,000 bucks in 2 days and started calling it a shitcoin once it didn't deliver that stupid and unreasonable expectation.

It's no one's fault but your own that this coin isn't meeting your ludicrous standards. It's a great coin and has a great future and it's going to do just fine without people like you dragging it down.

Bull has made some calls that have made several people anywhere from 100-500% in these past two weeks while everyone is on these forums boo-hooing about their precious coin that has put them in loss because they're holding like sheep. Not every call is going to make you profit, however, if you follow his advise, diversify on his calls, then you will win more than you lose just as any trader could, and make profit.

Why not? What's holding you back? It's such a breakthrough, however they've got to market some more. Their main focus is consumer adoption, which is something a lot of coins don't primarily focus on.

They have Smartbridge technology, they've got the amazing flexibility of coding language which is pretty big for developers, you can create your own Blockchain with ark, they've got the delegates system, they've got staking, they've got one of the best wallets in the market, they've created / are in the works of creating a decentralized "exchange" where you can buy / sell other coins through Ark, which people will soon realize when these online centralized exchanges are heavily regulated / shut down, will be huge, they've developed nearly their NFC technology (wearable devices) to further add to the consumer adoption agenda, they're 90% done with mobile wallets, 95% done with creating their business entity/identity which will be essential for partnership focus they're going for in Q1 and Q2 in 2018.

The coding language flexibility aspect is 75% done.

They're going to be essentially the sandbox for the future of Blockchain technology for ICOs and startups.

Buy now while it's low, ark will be a top 10 soon

I hope you realize the whole mainstream consumer adoption mission in BAT is fueled by the hope that people will use Brave and switch off from conventional browsers (probably won't happen, no one cares For the few cents you'll make)

ARK is 1000x a better coin with consumer adoption in mind. It's a truly beautiful project, look into it. Top 10 coin before December next year

Circulating Supply: 1,000,000,000 BAT

So lets say in 2 years there are still 1,000,000,000 BAT

$1,000,000,000 * 10 = $10,000,000,000$ is the amount of money invested into this coin needed for it to reach 10$.

zercherit87 - October 29, 2017, 6:56 pm

Well, I had a lot of hope for this coin having invested a decent sum of money into it. I withdrew at the 17¢ range because it was going down because of BCG.

We are going to have to wait until 2018 at least to see a decent % gain from BAT.

Also doesn't help that the team could give two shits about the price of the coin.

Now, it's not my fault anyone invested in BAT longterm / short term at the wrong time. I've simply have been highlighting what and why BAT is where it is now.

If you have negatives in your portfolio at the end of the day you should make your own assessment and judgement, trust me, I know that very well. Lost near 50% of money I had going all into this one coin, due to not doing my own research and not being able to do TA well nor assessment.

The coin i was talking about wasn't BAT, it was trig and no one told me to invest in that coin, I found it myself and thought it had a good idea however now that I've come to realize it, not because I lost 50% of my money, it was a really shit product and shit coin. The website is fucking awful and the roadmap is pretty elusive. The idea sounds like some sci-fi shit

I'm way better at identifying good coins now, trust me

Oh and my TA is 1000 times better than before

Goals - November 10, 2017, 1:27 am

For the price to be $1 it would need a marketcap of $1 billion, making this coin the 12 ranked coin by market cap.

Do simple math of price * circulating supply = marketcap and compare it with other coins. You could easily work out that this is a very unrealistic speculation.

Right now its market cap is 160 million and the highest it's market cap reached was 300 million. Extremely far from 1 billion this is why you research and learn why these factors that seem to just be mere numbers on coinmarketcap are extremely relevant to your expectation.

Why? Youtube ad monetization is in a weird place right now. Big youtube and twitch "celebrities" have millions of subscribers, some of which love to throw money at them. Some are kids that will listen to whatever these guys say. If one of these big channels tells their users to start using Brave payments, it could make a pretty substantial impact. Maybe unlikely, but definitely possible.

You know for a fact? You don't at all. Nobody listen to this clown.

Just because google is working on something similar (please provide a link, because it sounds like bullshit), doesn't mean BAT can't be a superior product? How much did Facebook buy Whatsapp and Instagram for? Oh yeah, you don't know shit dude lol. If Google within the next year buy the Basic Attention Token idea, I'm legit going to buy you a nice holiday anywhere in the world. Quote me on that.

Edit: <https://contributor.google.com/v/beta>

I've just looked it up myself. It's a totally different concept. It's a paid ad-removal service, which isn't even fucking relevant to BAT's mission. Advertisements will ALWAYS exist, and the idea behind BAT is to reconstruct the way ad's function and are viewed on the internet.

Please don't post such rubbish when you don't know what you're talking about.

Edit 2: Also, websites have to give Google permission to have this shit. It's literally Google wanting to skim some more profits. Facebook doesn't give a fuck about removing their ad's for people for the cost of $5 per 25 pages visited. It's pointlessly adding Google to the equation to skim profits. Why on earth would Facebook want to start giving Google money. Not a fan of this contributor bullshit and I doubt it will ever go mainstream. Probably just an indie fix for smaller struggling sites. $5 for 25 pages...? Restructuring the ad framework on the internet is a million times better for longevity of the internet.

i'm glad i bought in at .12 xd thomastur123 - January 4, 2018, 8:49 am

Indeed! Bought around the same price as you. Just HODL, BAT is a really decent coin actually solving some problems and has a team of people that already proved them selves!

zercherit87 - January 6, 2018, 8:06 am

We're going to $5 and beyond this year boyos

lol it took a looooooot to get to where BAT is right now xd so much back and forth it was almost demoralizing at some points

GloryToBe - January 7, 2018, 12:26 am

Looks like it's very close to hitting $1, going to put about $300 into it and hopefully make an easy $100 if it hits $1. It shouldn't take too long.

It was a very long road there, at some points it was so bad i ended up selling. (Going from 6900 and hitting 1011 SAT, that was really tearing).

Unlucky i sold, would have made bank if i wouldnt. Oh well. ?

Erectus - January 15, 2018, 2:48 am

Still not worth IMO , a coin in crypto that can make you 4x in 4 months (bought @.25) is a coin not worth investing into .

Its crypto market and the past 3-4 months were insane . I gave up on BAT a long time ago , on a small loss , and i invested my money on coins and tokens like EOS , ETH ,LTC

And it was the best decision i've done .

Again this is just my opinion .

thrudda - January 15, 2018, 4:31 am

I think it briefly touch about $0.90 awhile back? Got in at about $0.20+ somewhere last year, strong fundamentals thanks for the tip OP. Gonna be 1 of my long term coin zercherit87 - April 22, 2018, 11:15 am

BAT is making a comeback. after topping out at nearly $1 and then falling back to near 20c, we're back up at 43c. i've sold part if my stack but still holding a decent amount

Feels fucking great to see the bump im holding 10k since 0.12 and I still choose not to sell.

Just the team and the idea behind BAT is going to attract lots of investors and hopefully make me some money. I'm not going for that 1000 dollar profit crap that's not why I'm in this.

Not ATH. It was more than x2 current sats price in summer of 2017. I believe it reached 15k sats.

While I agree 90% of shitcoins in the top 100 will die, I think BAT is one of the few that will survive. We are not in a bull market, bitcoin is on a bull market, the rest of shitcoins are literally on the verge of collapse.

After drawing some meme lines, I think is a great time to buy BAT again. Last time i sold at 7k sats, missed a more 20% pump but eh, I'm not a fucking psychic either. 3-3.5k seems like a good entry to me.
