

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Cashed's Testimonial - 5 years

Vegeta - August 16, 2017, 2:15 am

Hello everyone,

I joined HackForums in August 2013. I first heard about this site through a friend named Nathan and another friend named Callum. I had signed up to look at the gamertag section because I had found it fascinating looking at all these awesome alias' at the time. I then branched out and looked all around the site to get familiar with what everything meant and was and how it all worked. This is the second forum I had ever been on so the whole forum concept was still a little new to me.

Couple years down the road I finally accomplish something and purchase my first gamertag in the marketplace. I was still active here and there throughout my grace period but after I bought that gamertag I found myself a lot more active. Met some cool people, joined some groups and had a lot of fun. Started getting into bitcoin a little and playing xbox with some people, it was a blast. I genuinely enjoying opening my laptop and getting on here. Aside from the trolls here and there, this place is great.

About a year later I sold my first gamertag here and it was to someone pretty known so I was feeling good and I actually took that money and got myself a new xbox. I found myself a lot more positive and friendly on here for some odd reason but it's better than coming off as disrespectful. Still enjoying every second and continued to play with people on xbox I ended that summer great. Gave me something to do at night rather than just playing on xbox alone.

HackForums has provided a nice and comfortable place for me to relax in my free time. There aren't many things in my life that are stress free, so I am happy that I can come here whenever I like just to get my mind off of things and talk with some cool people. I would have to say my favorite thing here within the last year or so was probably the pokemon go bots, that stuff was so fun and the section was relentless with coordinates. It really is awesome that I look at this website not only as a way to better myself but to be happy and stress free.

Thanks to everyone on HF for making it what it is today, it truly wouldn't be as good without everyone here today.

Best regards,

Cashed