Thread: iPhone users - How do you organize your apps?

funtela - August 16, 2017, 8:52 pm

I'm not jail broken. But my apps are a mess. But I keep my 7 pages of apps cause I know I'd eventually have to use them again.

Just trying to organize my shit :)

Up to personal preference.

Most apps go into my Extras folder. Work apps into my work folder. Then certain apps that are used a lot are placed on my home screen. I only have 1 page on my iPhone. Any more and my OCD is triggered haha

When I had an iPhone I made sub folders, I'm not sure if the bug is present in the newest iOS but google "Docked folders".

They were folders inside folders so I could make everything extra clean because iOS forces you to have all installed apps present on the home screen.

That's one thing I really hope they change.

The RANDOM folder is one I put apps that are used but not as frequently. Very large screenshot below. Also currently working on the BG. I'll custom make one Nice I like it.

And on the first screen you just have a plain background?

iOS would be perfect for me if they would just let me hide apps.

The bad thing about that is you'll struggle to remember how to find them when you're used to everything you need daily on the home screen.

The first screen is the Spotlight screen. That picture is the only screen I have on my phone with apps. I search most of my apps and the Siri App suggestions are great Oh wow. Brain fart lol.

I just put all the apps I don't use anymore in a folder so it doesn't look like my phone has herpes.

You good my friend. I just recently switched back to iOS and I must say I did miss it. Both OS's have their perks though. Different strokes for different folks

It seems the older some people get end up switching to Android (From what I've seen).

I organize my apps by what category they fall under.

VirtualFrost - August 16, 2017, 11:18 pm

I deleted all useless default apple apps or hid them away in an 'extra' folder. All social media apps are in one folder, sports app in another, apps I use frequently are on the first page and any misc/games are all on the pages after. I always delete apps I don't touch for months so I only have 2 pages tops

Usually just naming folders and throwing in apps that apply
