

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Been playing with a way to get custom URLs on youtube.

Mr. Robot - August 17, 2017, 4:22 am

So after checking this dudes thread.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5696540>

He reckons he has a way to get custom URLs on youtube. I think I found out how to do it, so for anyone who has input or wants to contribute and get this for free - tag along.

So what I found is the only way around this is to create a business google + account and then link a "Brand Account" and voila you should get one (if you verify your address)

If not I think you might need this

<https://support.google.com/plus/answer/2676340>

Quote:Rules for getting a custom URL

There are a few rules to keep in mind when you're trying to get a custom URL. If you're having trouble, make sure:

You have ten or more followers (people who have added you to their circles)

Your account is at least 30 days old

Your profile has a profile photo

Your account is in good standing

Anyone wanna play around with it with me -

Zens - August 17, 2017, 4:27 am

uhhh, #Exposed.

Spoiler (Click to View)

I can not believe he sold it in the market.

Mr. Robot - August 17, 2017, 4:28 am

(Aug 17, 2017 04:27 AM)zenzuk0 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) uhhh, #Exposed.

Spoiler (Click to View)

I can not believe he sold it in the market.

It's not confirmed yet, still going to play around with it to see if I can find a way without having to verify an address.

Will need to find someone with 10+ followers and 30 day old account (with a profile pic)

Punisher - August 17, 2017, 1:18 pm

Custom YouTube URLs have their own requirements, and Google+ custom URLs are now separate from YouTube - they don't carry over.

Here's the most extensive FAQ for YouTube URL creation I could find;

<https://productforums.google.com/forum/#!topic/youtube/CCbcrRSO2ng>

The link you quoted in the OP is the requirements for a custom Google+ URL

Quote:What are the eligibility requirements for a custom YouTube URL?

Have 100 or more subscribers

Be at least 30 days old

Have an uploaded photo as channel icon

Have uploaded channel art

The trick involves setting your first name on Google to the first few letters of the URL you want to claim with a blank last name.

Then you get the requirements for the YouTube custom URL

When it offers you the ability to claim your URL, simply add the rest of the word to the end of those first few letters.

Example:

I want youtube.com/c/Error

I set my first name on Google to "Err" with no last name

I get the requirements for the custom URL

They offer me "youtube.com/c/Err_____" and I must add letters or numbers to the end

I add "or" to the end and claim the URL

I get "youtube.com/c/Error"

I haven't successfully done it because even though I meet all requirements for a custom URL I am unable to claim one due to using non-standard characters in my Google profile.