Looks great! Would be even better if it can scan for 3char domains!

As in every 3char that can possibly be made so you don't have to make the list.

Anyways GLWS

Looks awesome. I did quite a bit of domain trading a while back and most of my time was spent looking for domains. This could be incredibly useful. If there are any vouch copies available I would love to try it out and post a review. If not, good luck with sales and I might contact you later on. ?

This looks interesting! What sort of places would you recommend we could sell these domains at? For example 'PlannerTV.com' like in the post above?

EPLS - August 22, 2017, 3:50 pm

My review of this product:

I was lucky enough to receive a vouch copy of this program yesterday. I tinkered with it through the night and for a couple of hours today. The scanner works great. There are a couple small tweaks that I personally think that would make it easier to use, and I will mention these to Mr. Burnham. I will not mention them here because they are pretty trivial and have a small impact on my overall opinion on this program.

It works great. I remember spending hours looking at 4+ websites looking for recently expired domain and hoping to catch 1 or 2 of them per day that were brandable to flip and sell. This tool takes SO much of the mind numbing and eye straining work out of refreshing pages for hours just to find a few domains. It is also useful for a quick domain search for anything that could be recently brandable as trends pop up frequently, so you will have a massive search advantage over many competitors.

Overall, I give this program a 9/10. It serves its purpose well and will save users many hours of their time. The product does come with some word lists, but I highly recommend adding your own as well to further fit your individual needs.

GLWS Mr. Burnham, this is a very nice tool, and I highly recommend it to domain flippers.

I've been offered the product for a review! Expect a review to be posted in upcoming days!

Mr. Reviewer - September 1, 2017, 12:30 pm

The tool does its job perfectly, one thing that I want to mention is it doesn't search for country specified domains such as .ro .ru .ag .uk and other countries around if you're not American or don't want a business internationally, only for .com .org .net and few others.

Good domain names are found to increase CTR. In both whitehat and blackhat methods, high CTR means more profit. There is no reason to settle with mediocre domain names when there are tools around like Brandable Domain Finder.

How does this work? do we need to upload a list of words? the combination of words are always the same for every keywords we choose?

MODERN - March 9, 2018, 9:44 am

Definitely interested in this, posting to remember to come back here. BTW would be really cool if the godaddy or namecheap apis were used to show prices next to the available domains!

No, it has several lists of words already and you can edit them easily to target current trends.
