Thread: [\[Newbie\] Wanna get into hacking](#)

Zipp3rx - August 21, 2017, 3:27 pm

Hi dear forums. ?

I have just joined here for two reasons.

First is the wish of being a hacker.

Second, I'm looking for people that could kind of point me in the right direction as I have never really hacked anyone(or anything) and when I tried, it didn't really work out well.

I have small coding knowledge, (Got Kali on vm too btw ? (but that still needs sh*t ton of configuring?)) kinda logical thinking works too , so if you tell me how things work, it should be easy for me to understand.

Thought joining a public forums would be a good place to start, as most of the better crews are lurking in the shadows of Deepweb(and yes i know what is Tor and that you need a little extra shifty tools to feel a bit safer there), and I do not have the skill, nor experience for going near that place.

As I said, it would be genuinely appreciated if someone would help out a bit on this, and maybe show where to start.

Thanks

Zipp3rx

You might get some hate for this thread, unfortunately people don't like threads like this. :/

Totally fine for getting roasted, but you know, everyone always begins somewhere, and this is where i do so.

Start out with Basic and Advanced Networking, move on to coding, whatever you like, could be Python or more advanced stuff.

There's your direction.

Zipp3rxIgnore the hate comments, even tho hackforums called hackforums there a lot of unskilled people.

anyway the only thing i can suggest you is to work on being safe, there a lot of good guides for a lot of good stuff so just look for it.

Thanks a lot. I did do Python on CodeAcademy and I spent around 4 hours every week on it for about a year. Then i kind of lost track of how i could use it for hacking so I had to leave that there isn't going to be someone that is going to teach you.

but if you have questions or want a small lesson to get started send a email and I will response for the right price (see website)

You do need to know how something works before you "Break" it.

Helping others getting started is one of the things forums are here.

Helping others getting started is one of the things forums are here.Helping others getting started in hacking is one of the things beginners suffer from. Information independence should be the first skill they gain. They will not reach fair without it. You are damaging them by helping them.

Learn the lingo, and a few things about python then C++. And that'll serve as a foundation
