Thread: Weird question about the internet.

Mr. Robot - August 27, 2017, 8:30 am

So what if one day we are able to share 'smells' across the internet or even 'tastes'... Would that be the new rick roll?

Make cooking based websites and make everything smell like who knows what?

This is a future meme in the making right?

You really seem to have too much time on your hands

Froggy - August 27, 2017, 8:34 am

I hope this never happens. People would share smells of farts, vomit, and everything else pungent.

Bossk - August 27, 2017, 8:40 am

I would feel pretty rick rolled if I clicked a link and felt the taste of cock in my mouth.

This article from 2014 talks about a device that let you share 360+ smells like text messages across the internet.

If you google Digital scent technology there's lots of information about this, not so weird as you think.

Toph - February 7, 2018, 6:35 am

Very interesting technology. It would allow endless possibilities for advertisement.

sAVITAR - February 7, 2018, 6:53 am

Lmao would love to taste some things not available where I live. But I guess it's not safe if you can just send a website full of shit taste to someone xd

Kuso - February 7, 2018, 7:05 am

Imao digital scent technology.

If that is a ICO I would def dump money into it.

You hinting at something here?

DestinyX - February 7, 2018, 7:08 am

How? It's just physically not possible..

Maybe through your computer that releases a smell whenever you wish or so?

Still weird.. This happens in cinemas where you see a number on the screen and then scrape it on your card and smell that "scene?"

It's called 4D cinema lol - not sure, but I've heard this

Fantod - February 7, 2018, 7:16 am

Would definitely add diversity to the internet.

Saltpeter - February 7, 2018, 7:46 am

This could be used in horror games to achieve a sickening level of immersion.

It will probably happen one day but I sure hope it never does.

N110c - February 7, 2018, 7:47 am

HF would smell sooo bad. I hope this will never be a thing.
