TheWarOwl - August 30, 2017, 10:50 am

I think this should deserve a vouch because it's got everything required in terms of legal remote control on it. And it's at a relatively cheap price.

I can see this used to watch your computers, especially commercial ones. The only concern I'd have would be persistence, might I ask what this offers in terms of that? Maybe multi process would be nice so if the user attempts to kill one of the processes (and succeeds) the other process will screenshot / webcam snapshot the offending user and report it to the Admin.

Other than that it looks pretty good! GLWS ?

Product Review For EAGLE EYE -

GUI 7 /10

GUI is clean and easy to use, I think it should have more and better features like the option to disable pop up message of admin.

Overview - 7/10

Seems to be stable, but not easy to be spread or other kind of "techniques"

Features - 7

I have not got any kind of errors or bugs but I believe with more effort this tool could have more features like hidden rdp, migrate server to calculator.exe or office word etc.

Overall - 7/10

Its good, simple and easy to use, you get what you pay, but with more time and effort this tool could have better features

My expectations before trying this tool was low because i thought "well just another rat" but that was not the case, the tool is a really powerful tool that is really easy to manage because of the simple GUI, this will enable people to get the hang of the tool in minutes by just playing around with it like i did?

The clients are very stable and it didnt crash on me even ones with 18 clients running at the same time and it will defenitly handle much more!

I have tried to search for bugs but cant find any so it is well coded for sure!

It is feature rich and the OP have told me that more is comming which is great ?

Overall rating from me:

GUI (10/10)

Features (8/10)

Easy to use (10/10)

If I told you we were better than Imminent Monitor in every way I would be lying. To be completely honest we are not better than them right now. However, what we do have works great and we will continue to add and improve more features in the future. Zero harm done, and as noted in PM, I'm not sure whether to be insulted or flattered.

You at least made a point to have a real EULA/TOS. Thats a hell of a good step for a lot of vendors in the marketplace.

In re-drafting your EULA, I strongly suggest you consult a lawyer.
My EULA, as good as you said it was, may not directly apply to your laws.

There is no coaster TOS. abide by your countries laws, cross your T's and Dot those I's. Its not worth fucking up if your gonna get in to this game my friend.

Looks like a really cool project, though, I think that with custom user plugin support it'd be even better, since many users have different needs, that's one of the things keeping this rat from being in the leagues of Orcus and IM for example.

Otherwise, Good luck with your project, the interface looks sleek.

Would be great if you added a feature which made it so the client didn't know they were being ratted, I would definety buy.

Bernlak - June 15, 2018, 9:43 am

This is a kind of... one way rat, for the ratters that are looking to rat their friends or enemies, no one would ever install it. but if it were for business use, for like remote computer repairs it's great. I would buy this if it was more of a hidden thing where you could disguise it as something and rat hundreds.

It is designed for business use and things of that sort, we firmly believe that RAT's are tools and shouldn't be used maliciously.

That is why our product is designed how it is of course, since it isnt hidden until it has been given installation confirmation it greatly prevents malicious use.

Encrypted connection? Why is this a function if this is interpreted for business use? Or the webcam function, i doubt a customer wants someone watching them posted up in front of there PC. Alerting them pretty much makes this client useless to most the users on the forum IMO. Especially being under the "Hacking tools and Programs" section.

If you are using this tool to manage your business then why would you not use encrypted connection? Not using one would leave your business vulnerable.

The alert also is simply to prevent abuse without infringing on our customers privacy in any way.

And we're under the Remote Administration Tool section, I didn't make the decision to put that under Hacking Tools.

After the purchase, I have never been able to use the software normally, I feel cheated.

And I didn't get any support, don't recommend this software, wasting time waiting and wasting money,

There is a free and open source QuasarRAT on GitHub, and QuasarRAT is much better than this EAGLE EYE RAT.
