

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Conor Motivation for you all.

Blazin - August 28, 2017, 9:39 pm

Less than 10 years ago, Conor McGregor was homeless. While homeless he met a woman named Dee Devlin. She took him off the streets, moved Conor into her tiny apartment and fed him daily.

All she ever asked was that he worked hard and believed in himself. She struggled to buy expensive, healthy food so Conor could train and stay focused... but she stuck by him.

ONLY 6 years ago, Conor was a plumber... barely living above poverty, but Dee stuck by him.

Last night, Dee sat in in attendance to once again support her man while he made over 100 MILLION dollars to add to his already successful new life.

Believe in yourself and find people to surround yourself with who believe in you as well. Life is too short to keep your circle full of people who will watch you fail.

Don't EVER let your circumstances or people hold you down. Get out there and take what's yours! No excuses!

<https://www.facebook.com/Embrace5B/posts/812266255609739>

A girl like this is very rare indeed.

Minnesota Nice - August 28, 2017, 9:41 pm

Fucking nuts how the dude was literally in poverty and now hes got fuck you money. Insane story for sure, and that chick hit the jackpot lol.

Blazin - August 28, 2017, 9:42 pm

The best part is you know she's not with him for the money. They been together since poverty.

Cagey - August 28, 2017, 9:44 pm

I'd be cocky too if that were my story, even though most of his smack talk was all to hype of the fight. Everyone thinks he was serious.

Conor McGregor™ - August 28, 2017, 9:48 pm

Man I get the chills thinking about his success story. The pessimist side of me makes me realize that there are people who work just as hard as Conor and aren't making it big at all. They don't have the natural skill or they have bad luck. It's really sad, but man I fucking love Conor.

Steve - August 28, 2017, 9:49 pm

Honestly, he's the luckiest man in the world for running into her. That's what you do. You build your partner up and grow together. You complement each other's weaknesses. Ride the lows and the highs together. Too many people nowadays want a finished product.

That woman is a saint.

Blazin - August 28, 2017, 9:49 pm

(Aug 28, 2017 09:48 PM)Desiigner Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Man I get the chills thinking about his success story. The pessimist side of me makes me realize that there are people who work just as hard as Conor and aren't making it big at all. They don't have the natural skill or they have bad luck. It's really sad, but man I fucking love Conor.

Well look at connor. He never gave up neither did his girl. I agree his success story is insane from how far he has came.

(Aug 28, 2017 09:49 PM)Steve Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Honestly, he's the luckiest man in the world for running into her. That's what you do. You build your partner up and grow together. You complement each other's weaknesses. Ride the lows and the highs together. Too many people nowadays want a finished product.

That woman is a saint.

That woman is a real Diamond in the rough. Agreed man.