I wouldn't really call it a tech forum, it just seems like a startup general forum. You literally only have one section(with one sub forum) that's about technology, the rest just seems like general discussion.

Theme is neat and simple, your upgrade and credits pages don't work however(maybe haven't implemented them?)

Gaming is also considered to be part of technology. More related forums will be added as I am just trying to get the one's we currently have started with content.

In the very near future I plan on adding forums for servers, security, software & apps, etc.

NodeForums is showing it's offline?

imanode - September 10, 2017, 8:08 am

We are currently migrating servers, I apologize for the delay!

I thought the title was 'Nude Forums' :(

Caligeina - September 10, 2017, 9:36 am

Why are you migrating so early on if I may ask?

Mainly for performance reasons. We are seeking to offer a unique experience for the users which also includes load-times and security. :)

For such a small forum you guys will naturally have a good load-time and your security should be fairly decent if you haven't installed a bunch of plugins already. I think the forum's been down for more than a day. I'm going to take a wild guess and say you guys are stuck in your migration because it doesn't take 24 hours to move over such a small forum.

Sadly there was a response issue on my part about the switch, the site is back up and I am working towards restoring everything. Again, I apologize for the down time.

We have a total of 9* forums at the moment while holding to a minimum of 2 categories for the simple fact that I do not wish to add more of what isn't needed. I need to evaluate what the members posts and if it seems as if it's going more off-topic of what the specific forum is meant for I'll add another one to fit that area. ?

Nope ? You make the 2nd person to say that, but I chose 'Node' to be put in the name since under a computing (not coding*) a node is a device on a network, and it seems nifty to me.

It's just that NodeJS has been very dominant lately.. sorta claiming the word "Node" to themselves.

Really dig the theme. Not overdone and colors go very well together. Best of luck.

You may want to either use 'CTRL + F5' or clear your browsing data as it display's fine for me and other users as-well.

If you could PM me the library (if any) that you used for the loading screen, I would really appreciate it!

Yes, we are still alive! You are the 2nd individual to say it is/was down, if you don't mind try clearing your browser data, flushing your DNS, and if those troubleshooting steps fail to work perhaps even restart your modem to see if it will reset anything!

(I checked with my hosted and asked other people and have came to the conclusion that the site is fine on both servers)
