Is copping shoes like yeezys and such then reselling them profitable? If so how much ROI can you recieve on these on average?

Pronouncer - September 9, 2017, 4:01 pm

$200-300 per pair on average

Riyu - September 9, 2017, 4:02 pm

I used to do this until PayPal wrongfully closed my account ?

Yeezys are $250 retail. The resell price has lowered due to the quantity they're releasing with nowadays but you can make around $200-$300 per pair.

You're going to need a bot for that many. You're also going to need multiple cards as well or else a lot of your orders will get canceled. (Depends on the site)

Exactly, things like this are hot. However they get your account closed... You're playing the cat and mouse game. Paypal accounts, retail website accounts, etc...

If you have a good bot, and money on hand to invest in proxies/good bot/multiple pairs of latest releases then yes. There's a high ROI.

e.g you buy 10 Yeezys at retail, that is $2k. Depending on hype and how many dropped, it can be $5k - $8.5k.

If I can find good suppliers I am going to be copping 20-30 pairs

You should be looking to make 20%+ on reselling shoes. The issue with yeezys are that they are expensive for people just starting out and that they have usually longer turn over rates. With $1k you should be buying cheaper shoes instead of buying yeezy shoes which you can only buy a small amount of.

Plus you have to deal with insurance it ebay, paypal or the post office. If you look at the whole market, a smaller % can afford them so you would do better selling shoes that are $70-150 and marketing them up

Edit: I mean if you are buying them at the release which is a pain, then of course it can be very profitable

I mean copping it at the release. Buying as many as possible and reselling on ebay for profit

B FOR BADASS - September 9, 2017, 4:40 pm

Yes profitable to a large extent. Just keep the price low that's the only way to get the product sold.

If you can buy them (and most bots are not effective) then yes of course it would be very profitable. You just need to make sure you mark it up effectively. You will need to pay a little more for shipping to insure the package and of course eBay fees.

how fast do they usually get sold out? Seen many bots on HF so guessing its pretty easy to make one You'll make more earning that 5% a day you claim from Gunbot ?

Yeezy selling is profitable, I've been doing it for the last year or so with bots and other ways to get around shipping etc.

There are dozens of problems wrong with both your mentality and plan. If you want to succeed in the sneaker game, do your research and come to your own conclusions. I've got multiple bots I'm using for the next drop, all work differently.

They get sold out fast considering the resell value is so great,

They might be easy to make but they dont work
