Thread: Speculation: LUN will be \$30+ by mid-November

Lunyr (LUN)

Lunyr is a decentralized crypto token based on the Ethereum blockchain which rewards users with app tokens for peer-reviewing and contributing information.

The goal of this project is to offer a compensation for those content producers that create and share reliable, accurate knowledge in the form of articles, videos and other digital medias.

Lunyr has built a clever set of incentive schemes that could potentially help it provide much higher quality information than other similar sites, including the likes of Wikipedia.

Milestones

Market

A strategic component of the Lunyr platform is its advertising system, which allows for the purchase of advertising on the platform using Lunyr tokens ("LUN").

Contribution and Peer Review Increases > Content Size and Quality Increases > Readership Increases > Value of Advertising Increases > Demand for Advertising Increases > Value of LUN increases (cycle)

TeamArnold Pham | Project Lead, Cofounder (Ethereum Developers Community leader)

Andrew Tran | Business Development, Cofounder

Christopher Smith | Blockchain Engineer

Advisors:

Dr. Greg Colvin | Technical Advisor

Alex Leverington | Technical Advisor

Grant Fondo | Legal Counsel

Reasons:

The team behind Lunyr consists of people with various skillsets from business development to marketing to legal counsels. This is a great sign for accomplishment to have a well rounded team in terms of keen skills.

Lunyr Private Alpha is scheduled to launch on September 18, 2017 on the Ethereum Mainnet.

Lunyr joined the Enterprise Ethereum Alliance \(EEA\) as of August 28.

The last quarter (October, November, December of 2017) called Interstellar, Beta will be released on Testnet and a basic dispute and resolution system will be planted.

The first quarter of 2018 is when Beta will release on Mainnet. The second quarter will consist of a peer review system upgrade. Third quarter is also an upgrade and is for the dispute and resolutions system. The last quarter is yet another upgrade which has to deal with the advertising system. Finally, in 2019 is when they release Lunyr's API for developers to work with.

I believe LUN will hit $20+ again on September 17-18 due to the announcement for the private alpha release. Just like the news on 12 August about the launch of the invite-only alpha caused a huge price spike.

Spoiler (Click to View)

My speculation: Lunyr (LUN) will hit $30+ by mid-November.
Price as of post: $9.42

I like the idea of this , and it's pretty cool. I read up on it a little while back. The smallest bit of news makes this thing pump because of the low marketcap.

I made a thread a while back on Lunyr.

I've come to the realization that it is in fact a cancer coin. A decentralized Wikipedia is essentially pointless. It may win battles, but it's not going to win the war.

1. How will they generate any money?
2. Seems like it'll take VERY long before anything of importance is released

You could buy on the current dip and sell on the incoming announcement hypes.

Also, because of the solid ideas and ethic behind this unique project, the extremely low supply and the team that is working on it, LUN seems to be a good token for a long-term investment.

I saw LUN on Bittrex the other day as I was browsing the currencies they offer, I didn't read up too much on it but now that I see this post it seems to have a very similar idea as Basic Attention Token (BAT). BAT is ran a little bit differently with their payment system, and it's implemented into the Brave browser, but Lunyr definitely seems like an interesting coin to read up on.

Looks like a stable team is behind this coin so should be good in the long term.

I'd wait for it to drop again.

I don't see their company as profitable?

Well I was right but definitely missed the speculation by a month and half. >.>
