Thread: What if a hacker cleared all student loans

Cagey - September 11, 2017, 11:18 pm

Wonder what would happen I can imagine how excited a lot of people would be but would the schools end up closing?

Interesting just thought about it.

SIM-2223238 - September 11, 2017, 11:18 pm

Someone has done it before but I forgot his name.

Steve - September 11, 2017, 11:20 pm

I don't think school would close. Most student loans are taken from the government or banks and not the schools themselves, so the schools still got paid.

severos - September 11, 2017, 11:20 pm

Probably they have backups, maybe even paper backups. But then again, they can play the "if you can't prove it, then you haven't paid" card, so instead of people not having to pay, those who paid will pay double.

I doubt they would pay double it would be the governments fault for being compromised not the students.

Well, if you're talking about government schools, I'm 99% sure they have paper archive for everything, they'll just tell you to wait until they rebuild the database, or they actually revert everything to paper work.

False King - September 11, 2017, 11:35 pm

The same when someone would clear all other debts, unpaid taxes and whatever. Chaos.

Considering this has happened before and the debt was completely waved over it again I doubt they would be able to do all that work. thats about 20 years worth of a shit ton of student loans they wouldn't know who was paid off and who wasn't it wouldn't be worth the time.

Ummm... no. Do you not realize that people have banking records and can prove they paid things? ROFL

For the most part, yes. Pell grants will automatically pay off it's amount in tuition. Some need gov't loans to pay off the rest of the tuition, and when you get that, that is yours to use at your discretion. But most schools won't let you go over a certain amount without paying previous term charges. $1K probably.

But even then, schools would still stay open.

Somebody please wipe out my student loan. It would be much appreciated! ?

Just hire some 3rd world group to do the paper work, will be hell cheap.

Underworldproblem - September 12, 2017, 10:24 am

If they cleared Federal Loans, that would be amazing!

Emily Brontë - September 12, 2017, 10:24 am

Someone has been watching too much Mr.Robot I see handecelebi - September 12, 2017, 10:27 am

That would be stealing and someone would be put in teh whole... .Because someone is not getting paid..

Really it would be pointless...

Thats like saying what if we didnt have to pay taxes for public schools but we still went.. Someone's not getting paid aka teachers etc.

Calogero' - September 12, 2017, 10:36 am

Just pure, absolute and uncontrollable chaos.

JustAnotherRandomDude - September 12, 2017, 10:53 am

Considering most loans have a paper trail. The loan issuer would have to hire 100s if not 1000s of people in one of the largest data entry task ever. Sure you can wipe a database. You'll have to burn down a storage facility to get rid of the paper trail.

C'mon, it's only 2017; there is still a lot of physical proof that cannot be cleared.

Well, that's how it is in the USA. Especially in rural areas where they're not exactly "advanced" in technology.

Not really they don't have paperbacks for everything maybe a lot but not all.
