Hello. Kindly clarify your questions when you post a new thread.

To get started in the field of beginner hacking, there are many roads that you may take. The most important question you should ask yourself, "what do I want to do?" Meaning, what kind of hacking are you looking into? Cracking, pentesting, reverse engineering, social engineering?

Google these and watch some youtube vids.

Also, download Kali as a VM and start practicing your linux skills. You don't need kali right away, but it will show you the many tools that are included in the distro. But then again, you should also look into a more user friendly Linux distro such as Ubuntu or Linux Mint.

Good luck.
