Thread: Vacation

Omniscient - September 15, 2017, 7:44 am

I've just returned from a European vacation. It was the longest vacation (12 days) I've taken since running HF. It was long overdue and a much needed break from my everyday activity.

Due to the risk to our security I do not announce it when I'm leaving. I do however work while on vacation enough to ensure there aren't problems and that members who advertise are taken care of.

I'm back and invigorated to get back to work and get API v2 running as well as a few other things that have been on the sidelines waiting to be executed.

Thanks for being patient to everyone who waited a few days for PM responses. I should be caught up today with support contacts.

On a personal note for those interested in my vacation. I took a cruise from Barcelona to Rome with a few great port stops like Florence and Naples (Napoli). I also spent a few days in a small town outside Barcelona called Sitges where I enjoyed days on the beach and a nice round of golf nearby. Overall a good vacation with good locations, wonderful food, and plenty of relaxation. I may post some pics on my IG account.

Baby Groot - September 15, 2017, 7:46 am

I hope you enjoyed your vacation, I have to ask what hotel did you stay in Rome due to looking to taking the misses there!

Thank you.

M?xim - September 15, 2017, 7:46 am

Sounds like you had a nice time. Some pics on IG would be nice indeed.

Got worried ngl haha. But glad that all is good.

Enzio - September 15, 2017, 7:46 am

Any chance of ever bringing a HF user with you one day? ?

HuntedCS - September 15, 2017, 7:47 am

Sounds like a pretty fun trip, I would love to see some pics! I am planning a few vacations for late this year, and summer of next year at the moment. ?

I don't think my wife would like that.

I honestly hope you didn't wait in that line to get on top of Florence's Cathedral. Stunning view but it takes a while to get there. ?

A recent hobby for stress relief. I'm enjoying it greatly.

No, I did get to go to St. Peter's in the Vatacan with a tour group but unfortunately due to time constraints we were only in there for about 45 minutes and didn't see it all. What we did see, was amazing.

Riyu - September 15, 2017, 8:09 am

I wanna go to Europe one day. Hopefully I get that chance

That's definitely a downside to running a forum as huge as HF, not being able to leave the site for a long period of time.

Considering you have ran HF for over 10 years now I'd say this vacation was more then deserved. Kudos to you for your continues commitment to this site!

I'm glad you had a good time, feel free to upload some pictures to Instagram or straight to HF if you feel like it!

Quote:you go to the art museum in Toldeo?

No, but I spent 2 days in the Louvre last year on a similar yet shorter vacation.

Quote:Considering you have ran HF for over 10 years now I'd say this vacation was more then deserved.

I take at least one vacation a year for about a week but this was in EU and we did 11 days due to the seriously extended travel time. Was 18 hours there and over 20 hours to return. I actually don't like to vacation for long periods. I prefer 2-4 day retreats more frequently.

Hmm that makes sense. I don't mind slightly longer vacations but 1 to 1,5 week is my max. I'm glad you're back though.

Same here. I'd prefer a 3-day vacation a couple times a year versus a single week or 10 day.

I guessed you took a long vacation. Nice you got to relax away from HF and the U.S. lol. Pretty jealous since Ancient Rome is my favorite time in history.

Very excited to hear you had a great time abroad. Italy is great - when I had the good fortune to visit several years back, I went to Rome --> Florence --> Venice. It's a wonderful country with great food. Glad to have you back.

Some great European cities in that list, I just got back from Paris.

You should have gone to a football (soccer) match!

Yeah, it was long enough. I woke up at 6am and started working as usual. Much to do. I adjust quick to jet lag because I just stay up to cycle to a sleeping schedule and that seems to work. I had to stay up 30 hours when we went there and 26 hours on return.

We went to Netherlands, Germany, Switzerland, Leichenstein, Austria, Italy, Monaco, France and England.

We been to many places in those countries, too many to list.

I'm from Italy and it makes me proud to know you've been here for your holidays :)

Exactly my opinion. While I do think the bigger cities like Amsterdam and Rotterdam do also have their positive aspects, I personally prefer the slightly smaller cities who haven't adapted as much to the stream of tourism as Amsterdam.

Amsterdam is trying to be a smalltime America that isn't under Trump's rule, in my opinion. Lots of Starbucks, trying to be diverse as possible, and so forth. Unless you go to the old parts, where the old Amsterdam feeling is still around, it's not really something that gives you the feeling you visited the Netherlands. Mainly because there's much less tourists in other big, socially thriving, cities that are still very welcome, it gives you a better feeling of visiting the Netherlands. It might be harder because of the language barrier, but then again, most Dutch people speak English, and if you ask someone (especially younger people), they'll gladly help you out.

I don't think I'm going back to Europe for a long time. Terrorism is a concern but the fact is I've seen my fair share of the continent. I'd rather go to Australia or Southeast Asia in the future. Also want to go to Alaska. I've done 4 trips to Europe. I think that's enough to last me a while.

Terrorism shouldn't be enough to put you off Europe.

Places I'd like to visit would be Eastern Europe, north-western Europe, South America and also East-Asia.

Don't really care about Australia or Africa really, they don't get me going. I'd like to visit Russia too..
