

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How do people know when they are quoted?

HuntedCS - September 15, 2017, 10:35 am

Would be really cool for a notification or message of some sort when someone quotes your posts? I know threads have been made on this, yet I never really know, yet people always reply back after I reply to a post they made of some sort? Am I missing something here?

Thanks in advance, really hoping there is an easy way for this. If my post sounds retarded, I am sorry, kinda tripping out for some reason rn.

Fortunate - September 15, 2017, 10:37 am

Omni said that he did consider this and is possibly working on it.

As far as I know there's not an extension that does something like it, all I can think of is just checking if the thread has new replies.

M?xim - September 15, 2017, 10:38 am

These threads are just becoming more common. It is as Omni said in his thread, this is something that newer users expects when joining. They expect to be notified when they get mentioned and such. It's gun b good.

Stixx - September 15, 2017, 10:40 am

I would enjoy this, but I could see how it would use more system resources for this site.

Maybe make it a feature for an upgraded user? Idk but I'd love to have this

PerfectStorm - September 15, 2017, 10:41 am

(Sep 15, 2017 10:37 AM)Fortunate Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Omni said that he did consider this and is possibly working on it.

As far as I know there's not an extension that does something like it, all I can think of is just checking if the thread has new replies.

Yeah I recall that thread too, he considered it.

HuntedCS - September 15, 2017, 10:47 am

Yeah I recall the threads, was just wondering if there was a hard way. I guess I'd just keep an eye on important threads!