Who Are We?

OUR MISSION

Socialites' mission is to facilitate the growth of newly registered members within our community and to enhance the quality of their interactions on Hack Forums. We strive to develop real friendships and inspire the personal development and advancement of each member.

OUR CORE VALUES

We uphold these core values in our own work and also promote them within our community. Our members have HEART. Harmony in Diversity - We organize diverse forces to achieve our goals, create a sense of community, and participate in the acceptance of all people. Encouragement - We believe we have a responsibility to use our experience, background, skills, and abilities to help others be more successful within our community and we encourage both personal and professional growth. Achievement - We are devoted to continually cultivating our minds and becoming the leaders necessary to achieve our mission. We recognize and reward meaningful contributions and strive to find ways to continuously improve. Responsible Conduct - We choose to act responsibly, weighing the consequences of our actions on ourselves and those around us. We operate with a sense of possibility, persevere in the face of challenges, ensure alignment between our actions and beliefs, and assume personal responsibility for results. Trust & Integrity - We preserve our character by doing what is morally right and demanding the same from our members. We value and care about each other, and have fun in the process of working together. We protect the trust that others have placed in us and preserve their confidentiality.

SUI-3183372 - September 15, 2017, 12:49 pm

I don't like groups. Groups generally piss me the hell off and are filled with immature/egotistical users acting like dickheads, people who care way too much about status on this forum. I view most group members as people who support each other while they scam, and just in general rip other site users off.

That being said, I joined a group. This group is different. The members are mature, the discussions are pleasant, and I'm certain that if a member does step out of line and does something bad, rather than rallying behind them, this group will actually look at the facts of the matter and respond accordingly.

I'm actually happy to be here.

Very cool. I know I was eager to see what you guys decided to do, UB wise. Looks great. Good luck Froggy, Chief, and all!

Androctonus - September 15, 2017, 1:37 pm

I have always been on and off HF. I started becoming more active the past month and a half or so and upon my return I messaged my good friend Saged on FB and asked if he was still active here, as I was considering remaining active. He told me he was mostly active in Socialites and in Discord. I didn't know what either of those things were. (Sad about the discord thing, right?) well I received an invite shortly after and it was funny to me how when I decided to come back things just sort of picked up where they left off for me.

Groups for me have always been an important aspect of HF life and I have never been interested in the majority of them. The Alliance was fun and I believe I got in through Saged and it proved to motivate me to give back what I could to the forum. The Reviewers was fun too and at the time was sort of a staple image of what it means to be HQ but was later proved an unnecessary service that also suffered from some abusive members. But aside from its flaws it taught me a lot and, again, helped me stay motivated to give back what I could.

The Wraith was basically just a localized version of SRPP without the trolls but to this day I am friends on FB with the owner, Hawkins. We don't really talk much these days but occasionally throw each other a "like" when we're expressing an opinion about something, just as we would in the glory days of TW.

The Minecrafters was a disaster that I am embarrassed to have co-led and the owner Castle Bravo ended up actually being super abusive on the forums. But at the time of its creation I was heavily involved in the MC aspect of HF. Advocating for quality in the section and constantly being a part of a project. HFRP if some of you may remember was something I played a heavy part in with Carbon, Chief., Saged and a few others. Sinful Gaming had a 40 player average for a while before it died. I was briefly moderator of the section when The Minecrafters came to be and I was super excited to use my knowledge of MC and bring an "official" server to HF. Well for those of you who experienced it.. I'm sorry. You know how terrible it was. But my heart was in the right place, dammit.

So far I've had fun being in Socialites and have made friends and connections and to me that's what HF is about. I've never really aimed to make money here or utilize the marketplace, a lot of my posts are in the lounge. But I've always enjoyed doing my part in the community. Everyone here seems to have your back. I get the feeling they would all help me if I needed it so I feel compelled to do the same. One of our members, Confound just got a sticky for a huge thread about pets. He asked me for feedback on it and without hesitation I read the whole thing and broke down everything I thought could use improvement, because I know he would do the same for me. It's cool to be in regular contact with some super chill people. That's always been important to me for HF and it's great to be with a few long time friends again and have made new ones. Looking forward to what this group has to offer!

Maxim is from like 2016 so I wouldn't say that. We are just a bunch of members who want to help make HF a better place.

A message to everyone: everyone is equally likely to be a Socialite regardless of when you signed up. If you consistently contribute to the forum and are a helpful member then I'm sure froggy would absolutely consider you to join Socialites.

Not correct. If you positively contribute to the forums groups will take notice of that when applying. It isn't easy, but it sure isn't impossible either.

Pronouncing your group name is a mouthful, it doesn't roll off the tongue.

Try and say this group name 10 times.

Have fun with your group tho.

Even though I'm unknown and my post activity is low af, I'm in this group's public Discord chat and all I can say is that I feel as welcome as if I were an official member.

Discussions are always entertaining and the general atmosphere is very friendly.

Also the activity is fairly high so you never have to fear of not having an "unread message" notification.

There's lots of questions and advice being asked and even more answers given.
Overall one of the best, if not the best, Discord chat I've ever been in and I can't imagine their private SF being of any lower quality.
Great bunch of members to be a part of and I can only wish them the best of luck and to keep up the awesome work!

That was like a week ago. And I had access to all threads. I mean maybe your group will be great, but judging from the content atm the "vouches" in here are pretty.. far-fetched. ?

But nevertheless, good luck. ?

And please tell your members not to PM me on discord or on HF about my posts on this thread or about a discord server from Socialites, they will get straight to my ignore list. Thanks.

We have locked subforums where most of the changes occur before they're made public to our members. Either way a lot has actually changed in one week as it's been ramping up for release with the graphics change and all of that, as well as a lot of things happening in the Discord. I appreciate your feedback nonetheless and I look forward to hopefully proving all the skeptics wrong. We just went from pre-alpha to the alpha phase of the group where the focus lies on the inner parts of the group itself, so people won't see too much from us for a bit while we perfect the foundation for what my plans are. I also dealt with the hurricane for a couple of weeks and am currently in recovery from surgery... so things are not happening as quickly as I'd like them to at this time.

You're welcome to join the Discord channel at a future date when it's released to the public, at the moment it is invite only. However if your sole intention is to troll then I don't see you lasting very long (depending on the type of trolling, we like to have some fun too).

Thank you for the well wishes. ?

(Sep 18, 2017 06:33 PM)LastSession Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well when it's in pre-alpha why do people leave such vouches?

We have had a few member-only events off of the forum as part of a "team-building" process. Their vouches are likely based upon those, as well as discussions we've had as a group as well as one-on-one. I'm very open to my members about what's happening but I am not releasing anything to the public at this moment in time. Keep an eye out, I'm sure (or hope) you'll change your mind when things get rolling. We can't please everyone in the end.

Any plans for the future in terms of helping/interacting with the public?

(Sep 15, 2017 01:37 PM)Androctonus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have always been on and off HF. I started becoming more active the past month and a half or so and upon my return I messaged my good friend Saged on FB and asked if he was still active here, as I was considering remaining active. He told me he was mostly active in Socialites and in Discord. I didn't know what either of those things were. (Sad about the discord thing, right?) well I received an invite shortly after and it was funny to me how when I decided to come back things just sort of picked up where they left off for me.

Groups for me have always been an important aspect of HF life and I have never been interested in the majority of them. The Alliance was fun and I believe I got in through Saged and it proved to motivate me to give back what I could to the forum. The Reviewers was fun too and at the time was sort of a staple image of what it means to be HQ but was later proved an unnecessary service that also suffered from some abusive members. But aside from its flaws it taught me a lot and, again, helped me stay motivated to give back what I could.

The Wraith was basically just a localized version of SRPP without the trolls but to this day I am friends on FB with the owner, Hawkins. We don't really talk much these days but occasionally throw each other a "like" when we're expressing an opinion about something, just as we would in the glory days of TW.

The Minecrafters was a disaster that I am embarrassed to have co-led and the owner Castle Bravo ended up actually being super abusive on the forums. But at the time of its creation I was heavily involved in the MC aspect of HF. Advocating for quality in the section and constantly being a part of a project. HFRP if some of you may remember was something I played a heavy part in with Carbon, Chief., Saged and a few others. Sinful Gaming had a 40 player average for a while before it died. I was briefly moderator of the section when The Minecrafters came to be and I was super excited to use my knowledge of MC and bring an "official" server to HF. Well for those of you who experienced it.. I'm sorry. You know how terrible it was. But my heart was in the right place, dammit.

So far I've had fun being in Socialites and have made friends and connections and to me that's what HF is about. I've never really aimed to make money here or utilize the marketplace, a lot of my posts are in the lounge. But I've always enjoyed doing my part in the community. Everyone here seems to have your back. I get the feeling they would all help me if I needed it so I feel compelled to do the same. One of our members, Confound just got a sticky for a huge thread about pets. He asked me for feedback on it and without hesitation I read the whole thing and broke down everything I thought could use improvement, because I know he would do the same for me. It's cool to be in regular contact with some super chill people. That's always been important to me for HF and it's great to be with a few long time friends again and have made new ones. Looking forward to what this group has to offer!

Quote:We uphold these core values in our own work and also promote them within our community. Our members have HEART.[/list] Quote:Harmony in Diversity - We organize diverse forces to achieve our goals, create a sense of community, and participate in the acceptance of all people.

Froggy, would you consider your actions as following this goal? It appears that you're solely inviting members who are your friends/you consider "elites". Also, you attempt to pride yourself in the acceptance of all people, yet you attempt to take words out of context with the intent in bashing an opposing group? Interesting code of conduct that you do not follow.

Quote:Encouragement - We believe we have a responsibility to use our experience, background, skills, and abilities to help others be more successful within our community and we encourage both personal and professional growth. If you have a responsibility to use your "experience, background, skills, and abilities to help others be more successful", why are you taking any ability possible to bash persons with different interests or viewpoints? Additionally, I'd hardly argue that you have either background nor experience in owning or leading a group, you've yet to do anything with it. Please, do not attempt to use your lack of experience to bash Acosmism and myself. You're welcome to target me; Acosmism hasn't done anything.

Quote:Achievement - We are devoted to continually cultivating our minds and becoming the leaders necessary to achieve our mission. We recognize and reward meaningful contributions and strive to find ways to continuously improve. If you are interested in cultivating your minds and becoming the leaders necessary to achieve your missions, perhaps you should recruit members of opposing viewpoints rather than your friends and the person who donated you the group? At least I can say, with a clear conscience, that I don't implement personal bias in recruiting members for Eclipse.

Quote:Responsible Conduct - We choose to act responsibly, weighing the consequences of our actions on ourselves and those around us. We operate with a sense of possibility, persevere in the face of challenges, ensure alignment between our actions and beliefs, and assume personal responsibility for results. If you operate with the sense of necessity to weigh the consequences of your actions, I'd argue that bashing a group and it's owner when they haven't done anything against you or your group entirely contrasts that ideology.

Quote:Trust & Integrity - We preserve our character by doing what is morally right and demanding the same from our members. We value and care about each other, and have fun in the process of working together. We protect the trust that others have placed in us and preserve their confidentiality.

I'd argue that integrity is the largest fault on this thread. If you are doing what is morally right and/or demanding the same from your members, is it morally proper to take a $5k donation and maintain arrogance for the entirety of it? It is morally proper to request closure of your account and then return and not face the consequences that YOU requested? If you value and care about each other, perhaps you shouldn't be putting a divide between group owners when the time to band together is now. There hasn't been any trust put into your group, nor will there be until you're capable of doing something with it. You've been given a gift, don't keep wasting it.

Best of luck.

Many of our members held zero interactions with me prior to their invitation. Our members are not "elites" but rather they hold the experience necessary to fulfill our group's mission. It is my belief that in order to run a successful group one must first build a knowledgeable core group of members, and our current 30~ members is that core. Now is when the fun begins of carrying out our projects. I wouldn't say I lack experience considering I've run and led many groups throughout my time on this forum, as well as outside of the forum. It is clear that you are commenting without any knowledge or background on the topic. You are not in the group, therefore you are not aware of what we are accomplishing. Move along.

We are currently not recruiting new members. Our requirements and standards change depending on need so that isn't exactly a question I can answer at this time. One week we might be looking for someone with specific talents, while the next week we might look for a new member of the forum. You aren't barred from the group however, if that's what you'd like to know.
