Rick Sanchez is my spirit animal these days. As a kid it was Scooby and Shaggy.

Today's generation would have to be Rick Sanchez/Morty (Fascinated with Rick & Morty) but if we are talking about 'back in the day' it would have to be no one, truly because I loved pretty much every cartoon out there. I didn't have a favourite but watched the majority of the cartoons on CBBC, Cartoon Network, Nickelodeon.

Saitama - September 18, 2017, 2:45 am

Bugs Bunny, still is entertaining like many other looney tunes characters.

o hai there - September 18, 2017, 3:12 am

Excluding R34? Stimpy or Mordecai.

y0shi3 - September 18, 2017, 3:14 am

Probably my favorite is Beast Boy, since I can relate to him very much personality wise, not the power wise although that would be cool.

SLY - September 18, 2017, 6:47 am

Courage the cowardly dawg.

Oh! Since I am one of them 90s kids who feels nostalgic about the amazing Cartoons that used to come on TV, I happened to develop a liking for many characters. But one character stood miles above!

Tom from Tom & Jerry is probably one of the cutest characters that one can find in the cartoon world. Children usually happen to like Jerry because they think he is smart. But since I was a child, I always rooted for Tom! I always looked out for moments in which Tom would catch Jerry and give him the look.

samurai jack was my real hero when i was a kid

Skull-13 - September 18, 2017, 8:12 pm

Looney Tunes, The Simpsons and The Flintstones of course.

Grey - September 18, 2017, 8:19 pm

Lisa Simpson, probably. I watched the OG cartoons from the 90s like the rest of you, but none of them really stick out to me as my favorite. I really liked Courage The Cowardly Dog, but it scared the shit out of me more than I got normal enjoyment from it.

Carolynn2424 - September 18, 2017, 10:17 pm

Stewie from Family Guy. The voice, all of it. Gets me every time.
