Thread: [Eclipse \[Official Group\] + Eclipse \[Official Award\] \[C/O: \$5500\]](#)

Views - September 17, 2017, 5:31 pm

I've decided to sell Eclipse (comes with two subforums) along with the final Eclipse award (limited edition set of 12)

You're allowed to keep the group as Eclipse if you'd like, or create your own group if you decide to keep it as Eclipse I can give advice, you're also allowed to do whatever you please with the Eclipse award (give it to yourself, give it to a friend, auction it off etc.)

I will be accepting offers in BTC and ETH you will be required to pay the $250 transfer fees. (Note: Payment Plans will not be accepted)

Current Offer: $5500 BTC for Eclipse 2 SFs + Eclipse Award

Buy It Now: $7000 BTC/ETH.

Who Soup - September 17, 2017, 5:33 pm

If you keep the award and decide to lower the price a little let me know as I may be interested.

My intentions would be to fully re brand the group.

Roytoy - September 17, 2017, 5:34 pm

Good luck selling this group. Seems like a great one.

funtela - September 17, 2017, 5:34 pm

Would you consider selling the final award on it's own?

Cameron - September 17, 2017, 5:35 pm

Well that didn't last long. Best of luck with the sale(s) mate.

Saltpeter - September 17, 2017, 5:36 pm

To whomever ends up buying this, please don't get rid of the only animated userbar on Hack Forums.

Thank you

Nope, I'm looking to sell this as a package deal.

If bought in a package could be used for your upcoming groups event or in the case you wouldn't rebrand could hold the Member Of The Year contest with it which brought in a lot of attention last year.

Groups try too hard to be this elite group of users who set out to 'benefit the community'.

The owner and its members eventually get bored of this, it's a boring cycle - I wonder when another one of the groups will pop up.

Groups ain't shit compared to what they used to be.

EDIT: Lmao, forgot Froggy just created one of them, I give it 6 months before the idea of that group also goes stale.

Its a marketing tactic. Look at future, Kim K and all the other hollywood stars who sell products. They all claim that its a blow out sale to bring the hype up, then claim that they are out of stock when in reality they have warehouses with millions in. Regardless they are his to give out, if you could do the same you know damn well you would so stop the hatred

I'd consider a BIN of around $5k but not $6k.

Also I thought you promised that people you sold that last award to that you were not going to be selling anymore. If you let this person have it, they could auction it off again?

Views - September 18, 2017, 9:06 am

Not going to put a BIN on this I'll move it whenever I see a offer I like.

I'd also like to respond to the guy about Rikz if it bothers you that much to keep you from purchasing you're not actually interested in the first place.

Whenever he is closed his award will be removed.

I'm not interested in groups anymore at this time.

In response to those who are saying this isn't the best deal ETC.

Nex+ was offering his group with 0 subforums at $4500, BUT decided not to sell with multiple offers of $4500, the last group sold for over $5000.

Eclipse has 2 Bonus SFs $300 each from Omniscient (note Nex+ group didn't sell at that price) (Notorious only has 1 SF as well)

Eclipse also comes with a limited edition award you can do whatever you'd like with receive it yourself, hold a contest or auction it off it's the last of 12 and after members get closed it'll become more and more limited as time goes on, you could also opt to keep the group as Eclipse with the current graphics as well.

Also take into consideration my point of selling. I did not need to sell, it was making me 4 grand if I did cause I needed bitcoins urgently, but I have them now. I wouldn't sell for anything less than 5. the price 4,500 I was asking was to sell urgently and quick within a day

I mean it's pretty common logic that eventually most people get closed at some point rather it be for inactivity or for other reasons.

I don't see Hack Forums going anywhere for a long time so just in general in the next 5 years I wouldn't be surprised if one of them lost interest and stopped logging in.

You can't get closed for inactivity, and it's not like one member getting closed in 2 years will make the award seem special as there are other people that have it.

I personally won't be releasing any information around the UB or award, if someone doesn't decide to make a worthy offer soon I may just decide to keep it.

I broke down the cost here and as I said earlier $6000 is the starting offer not a BIN.

Appreciate this, for the people who are curious around the award I might've already said it but they've sold for $1050 and $750 publicly on auction before and this is the last of the set so I think that increases the value some but I won't be releasing anymore information around the animated UB or group award.

Realizm - September 19, 2017, 3:50 pm

Sad to see the group go up for sale. I remember when you first bought it. But as everyone does when it comes to running a group, you just get tired and worn down. So much time and commitment is needed to make a group worthwhile, so whether you get exhausted or simply fail... everyone sells. I mean why wouldn't you sell if you have no interest in it anymore? Just to let an old memory stay alive while holding what could potentially be thousands in your pocket and an active group for someone else to make memories with. Unless you are wealthy enough that a few thousand dollars means nothing to you. Which is why RedLions will be the only group to be the last group.

I know I sold my group only due to the fact that I had no time nor interest for it anymore. And although I am well off financially, I didn't see a point in keeping a group that would inevitably be nothing more than a dead sub-forum and a pun for others who discussed group activity. We never had an award, or a cool user bar that gave your username a shadow or glow, so we would be nothing more than an empty void for everyone to make fun of like any other group that just goes inactive. So why hold on to that rather than sell and let the next person try out their ideas?

I've decided I am open to selling the award and group sepreately if a offer of $1000+ comes around if not I will be selling it in a package deal, it's the last one and I won't be selling separately for less.

Question... If one were to buy the group, would it come with the animated userbar? Even if someone was to change it?

I don't believe I've seen any groups with animated userbars, so that's a pretty nice addition if so.

I don't believe I've seen any groups with animated userbars, so that's a pretty nice addition if so. You would need to be approved by Omniscent before you could think about buying one. Either that, or get someone that is already approved to own one to hold it for you.

It has been stated that all the graphics will remain so yes the animated userbar should stick around.

I will give you my autograph for the group. Best deal. Let me know.

On a serious note, this group is definitely worth the price. Not only do you get a group, but an award and an animated userbar too. That just out does all the other groups selling.
