Thread: Question about Harry Potter movie?

Roberto Scorpius Malfoy - September 19, 2017, 2:46 pm

One thing that came up on my mind was when Harry were taking Snapes tears after Snape got killed by Voldemort. What would happen if Harry wasnt there and took the tears? Snape would be known as traitor for ever?

Humo - September 19, 2017, 2:49 pm

How would he take the tears if he wasn't there...

M?xim - September 19, 2017, 2:51 pm

Yeah he would, pretty much. Glad that it is a movie so that they could place Harry there at that time.

He wouldnt be able to take them if he wasnt there and then he wouldnt be able to find out that Snape was on his side.

That's what he was willing to accept from the start of it all.

Surely it would make a sad story.Snape was a one of the great Heroes of HP.

Darknuke08 - September 21, 2017, 4:13 am

Yeah, we would think he is a douche forever

Androctonus - September 21, 2017, 4:42 am

Pretty straight forward. He'd forever be a traitor.

Don't talk shit on my Snary plooer.

Pretty much. Of course this is fiction so if anything there would probably be some record of Snape being the good guy in Dumbledores stored memories or some other explanation.

I actually really enjoyed the movies. I watched them all 3 or 4 times now and the story is pretty damn good.

Snape would have been seen like that yes. But it was never his intention to be a hero in the first place.

He was looking after Harry for the sake of Lily.

Im looking forward to the cursed child. When will it be realeased?

mutantroach - September 22, 2017, 4:46 am

I just finished reading the latest one, Harry Potter and the cursed child last night. I bought it last year and never read it. It wasn't too bad a read. Maybe it's just me but it wasn't as great as the main ones but it wasn't bad either.. I thought she had no story at first but she did have a bit of a story and beated about the bush in between just slightly.. I thought she was going to pull a Sydney Sheldon.
