Thread: Southern US hackers vs Northern US hackers.

HitchHiker42424242 - September 23, 2017, 5:25 pm

North: addicted to caffeine. Prefers Coffee.

South: addicted to caffeine but refuses anything other than sweet tea.

North: "Hi, welcome to our hacker space! We hope you enjoy using our provided tools!"

South: "Here's the parts for a computer. Build it yourself. Wanna go online? Build you own switch, we don't have enough bandwidth cuz big internet companies hate the south."

North: Drink all the booze hack all the things.

South: Drink all the bud light, hack all the things.

North: an undying love for computers.

South: an undying love for computers.

I guess we're not so different after all.

Edit: this is not a hate thing or stereotype thing, this is just based on experiences I've had with other hackers in both areas.

I live in the south and my city/state has gigabit internet and even offer 10gig/sec for personal use.

So not too sure how accurate this is.

Yandere - September 23, 2017, 5:27 pm

You ever click on a thread and just regret the time you spent reading it? Because I sure do.

I grew up in the south too and the fastest in the area is kilobit speed even today.

You're getting smacked just because you said bud light is the beer of the south.

Yeah but I'd rather not go back, it's my own mistake I'd rather own up to it.

I'll cherish this memory and thread forever, until it's trashed.
