

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Why do groups ask for this?

Crystallize. - September 25, 2017, 3:49 am

It always pisses me off when I see recruitment threads that asks for (profile url) why is that even needed for? You could just click the username and you would get it lol

Space• - September 25, 2017, 3:52 am

Probably if users get a name change when within the group, they still have the profile URL as a link to identify the user.

iKinky - September 25, 2017, 4:47 am i always used it as a filler question honestly. the response above me is what i would've used it for if i had a spreadsheet containing members/potential members

ka$h - September 25, 2017, 4:56 am

(Sep 25, 2017 03:52 AM)space Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Probably if users get a name change when within the group, they still have the profile URL as a link to identify the user.

Yea because owners and leaders do regular reference checks.

lol

Saltpeter - September 25, 2017, 6:25 am

Because it is possible to change your username and having your uid right there makes it easier to keep track of members.

Aveling - September 25, 2017, 6:29 am

Clicking the username also gives you the UID and profile of the person as the OP states. OP got a good question.

Debugger - September 25, 2017, 6:34 am

because they are owner's of the group so they can ask anything lol
we just need to follow instructions bro that's what rules says

Makaveli The Don - September 25, 2017, 6:59 am

For me, when I made the recruitment using Google Forms and having to review 100 applications, it makes my life very much easier to have the profile link on each application. You may get pissed off of a 2 second job such as getting your profile link copied into the application, but it helps the leaders tremendously.

Sometimes, leaders might copy every application and save it somewhere for further reviewing or so, and having a profile link there makes it easy. If it pisses a member off to do a small task such as copying their profile link, then leaders shouldn't really consider him into their groups.

Lukas - September 25, 2017, 7:00 am

(Sep 25, 2017 06:29 AM)Aveling Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Clicking the username also gives you the UID and profile of the person as the OP states. OP got a good question.

Which would be easier if you had 100+ applicants?

- Having them provide their URL/UID in the application form, right there for you to see

- Clicking each individual account, copy and pasting their URL/UID into a spreadsheet

Bos™ - September 25, 2017, 7:02 am

(Sep 25, 2017 06:59 AM)Makaveli The Don Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) For me, when I made the recruitment using Google Forms and having to review 100 applications, it makes my life very much easier to have the profile link on each application. You may get pissed off of a 2second job such as getting your profile link copied into the application, but it helps the leaders trendemensouly. Sometimes, leaders might copy every application and save it somewhere for further reviewing or so, and having a profile link there makes it easy.

OP got his question answered. I honestly get pissed off of those group owners that ask you to work graphically on your application. Like flowers and hearts will make an application bold ???

Debugger - September 25, 2017, 7:18 am

(Sep 25, 2017 06:59 AM)Makaveli The Don Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) For me, when I made the recruitment using Google Forms and having to review 100 applications, it makes my life very much easier to have the profile link on each application. You may get pissed off of a 2 second job such as getting your profile link copied into the application, but it helps the leaders trendemensouly.

Sometimes, leaders might copy every application and save it somewhere for further reviewing or so, and having a profile link there makes it easy. If it pisses a member off to do a small task such as copying your profile link, then leaders shouldn't really consider him into their groups.

well i like it Good

Mustys - September 25, 2017, 8:49 am

(Sep 25, 2017 06:59 AM)Makaveli The Don Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I edited the first lines JFYI.

"Using Google Forms and having to review 100 applications, it makes my life very much easier to have the profile link on each application. You may get pissed off of a 2 second job such as getting your profile link copied into the application, but it helps the leaders trendemensouly.

Sometimes, leaders might copy every application and save it somewhere for further reviewing or so, and having a profile link there makes it easy. If it pisses a member off to do a small task such as copying your profile link, then leaders shouldn't really consider him into their groups."

I would agree with Makaveli, you said it.