Sir, I think you have came across the wrong thread. When you use the search function there is a date on the right hand side letting you know when it was last posted. You can also select the order to appear from newest to oldest.

There is no need to bring a post from 2017 back to the top of feed. Nothing against 961API, great product in my opinion! Just letting you know brother ? this is referred to as "grave digging"

Quote:Gravedigging is frowned upon because the topic of the thread is usually dead - hence the term gravedigging.

This topic is still very relevant seeing as the seller is still active here, and still uses the very same layout for his licensing system.

Therefore the comment prior to yours are not deemed gravedigging, but is actually a relevant comment to the subject of matter.

The topic is the landing page itself which is a dead topic as of 2017. Where is the confusion here?

The landing page is very much alive. He still uses it, no changes. So I am sure he will appreciate a comment on his landing page and his company even two years after he posted the thread.

And now that this thread was bumped, I can look at the landing page which is still relevant to the owner and say it's looking professional and elegant.

looks good, maybe a little too much shadow but not bad for being 2 years ago just letting you know, your testimonials still have loremipsum and right under it says 'lest start' instead of 'let's start.'
