

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Fall 2017 anime \(your first impressions edition\)

Professor Pantsu - October 9, 2017, 11:17 am

New season is starting and with it comes the task of weeding through the shit and finding the gold.

What have you guys picked up?

What do you have high hopes for?

Drop or thinking of dropping anything yet?

Anything you recommend people to pick up?

Find any underrated gems yet?

List of shows and air times here;

<http://anichart.net/Fall-2017>

Personally I think this season is looking pretty killer right now, lots of comfy shows which is totally my shit. The new Kino's Journey is living up to the original in my eyes and The Ancient Magus' Bride is looking pretty wonderful. Girl's Last Tour seems like it's going to be a very pleasant watch with some darker undertones and I'm totally down for that. Love me some chill post-apocalyptic anime with cute girls. URAHARA started off trippy as fuck and I hope it stays like that, if nothing else at least it will be a pretty anime to look at. Konohana Kitan is giving me my daily dose of workplace moe and that's all it needs to do to get me on board. While I'm not usually a fan of battle royal type stuff (with the exception of the fate series) Juni Taisen started off really strong and I have yet to see a Nisioisin story that I disliked. Black Clover on the other hand doesn't seem like my thing but I'll give it a couple more episodes, seems like a lot of people will like it though.

DerMensch24 - October 9, 2017, 11:37 am

I think there's a lot of good stuff this season. Currently watching Shokugeku no Souma S3 and Shoujo Shuumatsu Ryokou, which I'm liking since it's giving me the same vibe I got from Made in Abyss last season. Ancient Magus Bride looks great but I want to wait for it to finish before I binge it.

Also decided to watch Pingu in the City because why not xD

RainbowHentai - October 9, 2017, 12:32 pm

The Ancient Magus' Bride and second season of Umaru are the only ones I've picked up and they are good so far