

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Where to post impersonators of high rep HF users?

Demylius - October 10, 2017, 3:19 am

I guess that everyone want to know of any impersonators, in case of a trade etc.

I just discovered a pair of impersonators of Honey Singh and Click (High rep).

Where is the best place to post knowledge?

(If you think it should be posted at all. If not, give me arguments please)

SLY - October 10, 2017, 3:20 am

Go to suggestions and ideas Section OP.

(Oct 10, 2017 03:20 AM)SLYjnr Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Go to suggestions and ideas Section OP.
Just kidding ?.

Fizure - October 10, 2017, 3:21 am

Technically everyone should pm before dealing with anyone offsite...so if you get scammed because you didnt then thats your own stupidity and you deserve to be scammed.

Nadisty - October 10, 2017, 3:22 am

Make a warning in the HF marketplace so others know that there are impersonators. That's all that can be done.

SIM-888979 - October 10, 2017, 3:23 am

Community Alert in the Marketplace Discussion section!

Demylius - October 10, 2017, 3:24 am

(Oct 10, 2017 03:21 AM)Fizure Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Technically everyone should pm before dealing with anyone offsite...so if you get scammed because you didnt then thats your own stupidity and you deserve to be scammed.

I was not stupid enough to jump in, and was not scammed.

But the impersonators could easily go try and scam 100 people after me.

I want to try and not make that happen :-)

Would it be OK to post their skype aliases etc?

Or it that too much exposure?

SIM-888979 - October 10, 2017, 3:32 am

(Oct 10, 2017 03:24 AM)Demylius Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I was not stupid enough to jump in, and was not scammed.

But the impersonators could easily go try and scam 100 people after me.

I want to try and not make that happen :-)

Would it be OK to post their skype aliases etc?

Or it that too much exposure?

Yes, that is fine. Personal information such as IP addresses are not allowed, though.