Damn nice.

A few questions, what is the salary like (if you don't mind)?

How did they find you in the first place?

Salary is between 3000-4000 pounds. It also depends how good you are at the job. If you do good you earn bonuses.

I have my own website where i give out predictions. They heard that i was good they checked my website and then contacted me.

V?rt - October 11, 2017, 7:55 pm

That's awesome man! Congrats on that, seems like a huge achievement to be flown out for a company!

3000-4000 pounds salary? I assume a month right? Cause that a year doesn't seem worth it.

My work is to check statistic, sometimes make phonecalls to teams ask them what injured players they have and stuff like that and at the end decide what odds im putting on them.

If you win a lot of money and ends up being + every month then yes they will limit your account but you will still be able to withdraw your winning money.

Contact me if you want to know some good websites you can bet from besides bet365

3000-4000 pounds a month is good for someone who's not married or has kids, I'm assuming you don't since you still look kinda young.

Imagine taking that, and building a foundation from it.

That's is OP's goal essentially; coming from his own website, onto being hired onto a bigger company in the same field.

Go figure ?

Bigger companies don't necessarily pay a lot better, though. Google for example doesn't pay their developers better than any other somewhat established company. Again 4k isn't very hard to hit with an own project.

Yes, but the networking and job security is there.

It's good for the resume, especially if you plan on continuing that profession.

In the long run, working for a company isn't the best option, but it can help you further yourself later on.

Asian Bookmaker like Sbobet, Maxbet, Singbet, etc.... they don't ban you if you constantly win since they are still losers there and they still earn money.

Pinnacle is not really an asian bookmaker, it's more a junction of european and asian but they still don't limit your account.

congratulations but i still dont rly believe you, it might be because of something else saying they found your site "sportsprediction.org" or even "csgoarena.com" is hard to believe because those sites has very low amount of traffic doesnt seems to be popular that much, in ranking, seo, even google searchers there is many other they would pick but ok still, did you got the job or something? i dont mean you have just license but i mean if you rly working for them.

all those betting companies are just scam in my opinion, its all over the news every now and then in russia, europe, east europe, central europe.

i talk about mostly the sites they say, 98% chance you win, send us $500 and we will make it to

$1500 in 24 hours which of course never happens and then they sued them

Peoples were promoting it in our country and kids started betting to him, kids used parents bank accounts etc so this went so much viral.

I don't comprehend why they need you? If you're not providing them some sort of "insider" information (which they likely have great access to, considering the success of their platform), what would they want/pay you for? I'm sure they have algorithms crunching numbers the entire day for odds and simulations of games, so I have no comprehension of why they'd need you as a "bookie?" What is a trader? If you're working for a betting company, can't you not bet? Isn't that some sort of collusion, which would mean your service is illegal (not that HF cares)? I guess you're willing to run that risk?
