Omniscient - October 12, 2017, 12:05 pm

If you want to join an open XMPP chat service you can try Hacker.im.

Hacker.IM Registration (client registration disabled due to Captcha)

If you have an existing XMPP service you can join an official HackForums chat room that runs there. I will personally be idling in there pretty often.

To find our chat room search the server "im.hacker.im" or more specifically we are located at "hackforums@im.hacker.im"

Some common features in the Hacker.IM service are file transfers, group chats, OTR, and more.

Come join in the fun and get to know your fellow HF members.

You should add a XMPP tab to the forum everyone forgot about the HF XMPP I would start using it again if other people did.

Yup, was wondering where you've been. But now I know. You're not on HF making dozens of posts per day. Instead, like many, you're using Discord to communicate with HF members. Really not sure how anyone can ignore the effect it's having on the site activity. It shouldn't be a surprise or perplexing why I'm doing this.

-- Are we sure peoples inactivity doesn't have to do with how fucked up HF was for awhile, making users feel like it wasn't home?

I think the meantime people were on discord, but discord is not the main threat here. I think the problem is that the community is not working as a whole to solve problems and Omni is pushing his focus in the wrong direction.

Hi everyone - quick update!

Firstly, we've reached 1300 total accounts! ?

The main announcement is that group owners are being permitted their own private rooms on the service i.e. `groupname@im.hacker.im` or something like that, possibly a different subdomain. Group owners will be able to set a password on their room, hide it from public view and also create a whitelist of accounts which are permitted to join. I've got a few little details to iron out tomorrow evening but hopefully I'll be in touch with some group owners in the next few days.

Thanks for making good use of the service! ?

No, he would have to separately install and configure Linux on his Chromebook. Chromebooks don't allow you to download anything unless it's off of their web store/android app store (depending on the Chromebook). It's not hard to do, but you can't download programs like Pidgin by default.

(Dec 11, 2017 11:48 AM)OneManCrowd Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What types of logs do you keep? If you do keep logs, how long are they stored?

We don't keep any kind of message logs from the Prosody (XMPP server) software. Some basic logging such as failed TLS handshakes and dropped connections due to network faults are kept mostly because they are super helpful for debugging purposes. That kind of information doesn't carry any sensitive data however, such as who you are talking to or the contents of your messages. Whilst we don't log your message data we still always recommend that you use either OTR or OMEMO to obfuscate what is being said. We make use of TLS for all connections to and from the XMPP server, so no one else except you and the intended recipient can see your private messages.

I agree. Unfortunately we all know what chat people use and all that does it take away member activity.

But we'll run the service anyways. I think some use it and it's not expensive to run ($22 a month). I may even move it to a cheaper VPS ($11 month).

perhaps make an incentive for people to use it? cause a lot of people don't know how to even start so they don't bother trying, plus id like to see it be active so i can use it again

You definitely should download Pidgin and setup XMPP (I can help you, if you'd like).

Let me know, Hacker.IM is GREAT, and there's always a bunch of people in the HackForums channel.

Hmm, the XMPP keeps disconnecting and reconnecting.

I am connected just fine to about 3 other XMPP services.

Other members are also reconnecting & leaving again. Is it being restarted to clear logs or is this an actual issue?

Xerotic - February 26, 2018, 10:16 am

I've been sitting in the XMPP channel. For those who use Pidgin and get annoyed by login/logout messages when people connect/disconnect:

Go to the "Tools" drop-down and choose "Plugins". After that check the box for "Join/Part Hiding". Then click "Configure Plugin" and set the options that you will prefer.

Some mobile clients connect/disconnect often so you may want to adjust the settings for these messages to appear.

Are you perhaps thinking of the old official hackforums.im service? This one is relatively new - hacker.im, which doesn't suffer from the same restrictions as the old one such as only being able to use your UID as your username, enforcing OTR and not being able to communicate with other public servers.

The main chatroom (hackforums@im.hacker.im) is fairly quiet, but XMPP is generally used for more 1-1 chat, as opposed to large groups.

The main purpose and functionality of the service is not solely the hackforums@im.hacker.im chatroom, but the federated XMPP network as a whole. There are thousands of people using XMPP every day, you don't just have to talk to people in the chatroom, XMPP offers single user chats too! Generally the chatroom has about 20 people idled inside, but the service itself has about 200 logins daily of 2151 total accounts.

Depends entirely on your operating system.

If you're on Windows I'm afraid Pidgin is the best you can do.

On Linux/OS X you might be able to get Dino working, if your system is modern enough.

We don't have a password recovery mechanism available, but send me a PM sometime and I'll manually reset it for you, then you can login and use a client such as Pidgin to change your password to something else. If you registered before we collected email addresses on the registration page (<https://hacker.im/register>) then I usually ask you to confirm the last IP address you logged in with.

I was skeptical about this, but the UI actually looks very good.

Yes, I idle in it daily. Usually about 15-25 people in the main HF room but the service is used well enough and is compatible with external XMPP servers.

Good enough for me, I will take a look at it right now.

Should most likely come back on XMPP then, it has been a long time since I've actually been on it (To be honest, last time I was on it was when HF was down for a few days).

because discord servers can make replace hackforums in a certain way, people just make lots of channels like if it was sections in a forum ect...
its the owner business (hackforums).
im kinda sad that we cant add ppl with discord only as user but thats good for him or ppl would say 'pm to join my server'..ect.

It doesn't. There are generally only about 20 people idling in the chatroom unless HF itself is offline (at which point we've peaked at 300 users total active).

Hacker.IM Registration (client registration disabled due to Captcha)

If you have an existing XMPP service you can join an official HackForums chat room that runs there. I will personally be idling in there pretty often.

To find our chat room search the server "im.hacker.im" or more specifically we are located at "hackforums@im.hacker.im"

Some common features in the Hacker.IM service are file transfers, group chats, OTR, and more.

Come join in the fun and get to know your fellow HF members.

I will love to join our XMPP chat ?

But I am not getting the procedure to join it, can you please give a bit more detailed method to join it? ?

Does anyone know of a Chrome extension or Chrome Web Store application that can access XMPP? I've tried getting into the chat multiple times in the past but due to being limited to only using the Chrome browser I am unable to chat. I may have to just take the loss and limit my XMPP used to mobile only.

A quick question: Is it too difficult to set up the XMPP and join the chat? will you join the chat if there's step by step tut to set it up on multiple devices?

I can't join the server, that's the problem for me.

Edit: Actually I'm just stupid, joined now.

I wrote a tutorial on how to set up a XMPP client and account. It also explains how to join the chat room. I hope this helps bring more users to the chat!
