

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [One of the strangest case of HF's history \[Thread closed\]](#)

KING - October 13, 2017, 12:54 pm

Hello everyone,

Today I'm going to present you one of the most strangest case of HF's history and we need your help!

My side of story:

As most of you know that I'm owner of KingVPN. I'm using script on my VPN service which Woopza made, 2-3 weeks back I was facing problem with script so I texted him. He helped me to fix the problem. I told him that your VPNEngine.net website is down, He said: I'm very busy these days and my partner Krue1 is handling it, Let me text him. I told him that your partner is offline from last 1 month, (I already knew that Krue1 is his partner). Both of them were not active so I asked him If he's interested in selling this project, I can buy it. Because I was afraid of my website going down too, As script used to do verification after every 15 days with his main domain VPNEngine. He said he is very busy and can't take care of the project and now my partner is gone too. He decided to sell this project to me, He was very mad at him.

I asked him before paying:

I already knew that he's the owner and creator of VPNEngine project but still I did my own research to make sure he has not sold this to anyone else. I checked all threads, posts of Krue1 too just to make sure that everything is okay.

My agreement with Woopza:

He sent me VPNEngine files and I sent him last payment:

<https://blockchain.info/address/1PG5ZKtSsBHZ7aMJQZHRW8fNs5HvZ6ebCK>

I decided to re-brand and make it a better script. Bought domain, hosting etc. Everything was working perfectly but the license system wasn't working properly and Woopza wasn't responding me too. Today I saw Krue1 online after 1 and half month. I thought he has left HF. I told him to send me new backup of VPNEngine, This is what he replied me:

I added him on Skype and we discussed about this thing, He told me he has paid Woopza $3000 too but he didn't mentioned this anywhere because he was told by Woopza to not. I think it's Krue1's mistake to not mention this anywhere on HF that he has purchased this project from Woopza. If he had done that I would never have buy this from Woopza. I know in this case we both are scammed by Woopza because he told us that we're only owner of this project. The thing is Woopza doesn't use HF anymore so making a scam report together was useless.

I asked Kruel for a solution to this problem, He said: He wants to do 50% 50% a partnership with me until he get his $3k back, I disagreed with him because he didn't paid me that $3k so why should I pay him? And I dont want to do any partnership in this project as I paid Woopza to be full owner of this project.

I presented him this solution: He can keep on selling VPNEngine, I was going to re-brand it completely anyway and add some more features to this script but he disagreed with me saying: But then I wouldn't get as many sales because there would be another competitor who would have a better version.

We both couldn't find any solution on this issue, We both agreed that I will make a thread on HF and audience will decide who should be owner of this project from one of us. He will shortly post his part of story below!

Note: Please do not reply without reading story, It's not one of those lounge thread.

CodeBinary - October 13, 2017, 12:59 pm

I hope you get this resolved. From what I read it sounds like its rightfully yours and Kruel should open a scam report on Woopza. However it does seem more like a situation of morals. If you buy a ring from someone and later you find out it was stolen from someone you know yes you could keep it but the right thing the to do is give it back or try and settle on an agreement.

Lukas - October 13, 2017, 1:07 pm

If Kruel was the first to purchase this, then it's his. He was just following Woopza's terms, nothing wrong with that.

Woopza is the bag of shit here, neither of you.

Phosmand - October 13, 2017, 1:24 pm

Open scam report on Woopza, re-brand the script totally.

You don't really owe Kruel anything that's just your good will but it's fucked up situation...

SIM-1589588 - October 13, 2017, 1:46 pm

(Oct 13, 2017 01:07 PM)Lukas Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If Kruel was the first to purchase this, then it's his. He was just following Woopza's terms, nothing wrong with that.

Woopza is the bag of shit here, neither of you.

If Kruel purchased it, where the hell he was for 1.5 month? This VPN now belongs to King.

(Oct 13, 2017 12:59 PM)Brian OConner Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I hope you get this resolved. From what I read it sounds like its rightfully yours and Kruel should open a scam report on Woopza. However it does seem more like a situation of morals. If you buy a ring from someone and later you find out it was stolen from someone you know yes you could keep it but the right thing the to do is give it back or try and settle on an agreement.

First thing in this situation ring wasn't stolen. It was left with someone else he trusted and that guy sold it to OP. It's not OP's fault.

Chorus - October 13, 2017, 1:51 pm

Kruel owns it, you were scammed by Woopza

James Burnham - October 13, 2017, 1:52 pm

Oh that is why my VPN is down with "license invalid". What the heck, woopza. Make things right, man.

REDVOID™ - October 13, 2017, 1:55 pm

Looks like it could go to a lawsuit.

James Burnham - October 13, 2017, 2:01 pm

"Current holders of VPNEngine won't receive any updates nor they'll have anything to do with me." Woopza, our deal was not for a 2 month license of VPNEngine. It was for a lifetime one. Now that you gave ownership to KinG with these terms, what will happen to the people that bought licenses? Insta-terminated kthxbai?

Yshanks - October 13, 2017, 2:38 pm

Kruel owns this forsure.. get this resolved..

M?xim - October 13, 2017, 2:42 pm

The project is yours. Neither of them have any rights to it anymore nor should they be able to demand anything from you (percentage etc).

Bad business smh.

g?th - October 13, 2017, 2:49 pm

I've seen no proof from Krule that he purchased VPNEngine, and there have been two new members with a low post count defending him on this thread. Looks a little sketchy to me.

Truly - October 13, 2017, 2:52 pm

This is why I avoid doing business with hf kids, they are the worst when it comes to greed.

M?xim - October 13, 2017, 2:56 pm

This reminds me of Mons & Niveus all over again (Netstresser). Partnership on big projects where you don't know your partner IRL is a BAD idea.

Vitani - October 13, 2017, 3:11 pm

(Oct 13, 2017 12:54 PM)KING Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) We both agreed that I will make a thread on HF and audience will decide who should be owner of this project from one of us.

This thread itself is one of the strangest things I've read in a while.

"Owh we can't agree on something. Better throw the story on the internet and have them decide"

I'm sure this can be resolved between you two.

Personally I do think it's yours as they simply don't have the rights to the project. The discussion should end there.

Lukas - October 13, 2017, 3:24 pm

(Oct 13, 2017 01:46 PM)J.P Morgan Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If Kruel purchased it, where the hell he was for 1.5 month? This VPN now belongs to King.

No, what? How does that make any sense. Kruel purchased it first for a pretty hefty amount, it doesn't matter how long his hiatus was. He was the rightful owner from then on out right when that payment was received. That should've been the end of it, no more selling should have taken place. It's unfortunate as to what has happened but it is what it is. The service is Kruel's.

SUI-3183372 - October 13, 2017, 5:38 pm

(Oct 13, 2017 03:24 PM)Lukas Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) No, what? How does that make any sense. KrueI purchased it first for a pretty hefty amount, it doesn't matter how long his hiatus was. He was the rightful owner from then on out right when that payment was received. That should've been the end of it, no more selling should have taken place. It's unfortunate as to what has happened but it is what it is. The service is KrueI's.
Disagree entirely.

I think the only fair solution here is they're both able to sell side by side, as competitors, their own versions of the product. Both legitimately purchased it. It's on Woopza for selling it numerous times, as neither buyer knew this, but neither buyer needs to be cheated out of what they paid for. Sucks for KrueI, sucks a bit less for OP, but I sure as hell wouldn't buy something from the product owner then be told by anyone that I can't sell it. OP bought it from someone who is technically authorized to sell, that's all that matters. Just because Woopza is a scumbag doesn't mean either of them need to be entirely fucked over.

Pain - October 13, 2017, 5:42 pm

So he magically appeared after 1 month or so after you got sold the project? Something isn't right here

Impervious. - October 13, 2017, 5:54 pm

Honestly, you both purchased it.

The guy scammed both of you, this is a fact regardless of the amount of money spent.

Sure you may feel bad about it but it is how it is, you don't owe anyone nothing. besides it sounds like more of a coincidence if anything, all of a sudden after all that time he logs on right after your deal? Please, 'coincidences' like these are rarely a coincidence.

I'd say go right ahead and sell what you wanted to sell, you had plans, a vision and something more to offer than the other party anyways. There is literally no reason (other than being a too good human being) to even consider not doing this.

In the real world noone would be doing this for you. (with very very very few exceptions that could potentially happen.)

make your plans and vision happen, there's no need to think about all this mumbo jumbo.

B3Plays - October 13, 2017, 5:55 pm

meh i mean tbh i think you should just do the 50 50 intill he gets his money back seems pretty fair

boniastar - October 13, 2017, 6:10 pm

When I read the tittle of this thread I imagined some supernatural stuff like a ghost on HF or something like that LMFAO..

well after reading my opinion is that you both own it you both have the right to sell it and rebrand it as you want without having to give account to each other, you can both sell it separatelly as competitors. Given that woopza no longer uses HF a deal dispute is useless but he has to respond you both because he scammed you, my suggestion is that you both join forces in finding him and make him respond for what he sold you.

Sholi - October 14, 2017, 7:34 am

(Oct 13, 2017 05:38 PM)Previously Known As.... Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Disagree entirely.

I think the only fair solution here is they're both able to sell side by side, as competitors, their own versions of the product. Both legitimately purchased it. It's on Woopza for selling it numerous times, as neither buyer knew this, but neither buyer needs to be cheated out of what they paid for. Sucks for Krue, sucks a bit less for OP, but I sure as hell wouldn't buy something from the product then be told by anyone that I can't sell it. OP bought it from someone who is technically authorized to sell, that's all that matters. Just because Woopza is a scumbag doesn't mean either of them need to be entirely fucked over.

Makes sense. This is by far the best solution.

/thread

Krue - October 14, 2017, 3:08 pm

Here is where I stand on this.

Basically Woopza had no right to sell this as I had bought complete ownership of VPNEngine. The deal was middle managed by Regulus and was my 1.2 BTC for Woopza's VPNEngine project. The deal had gone smoothly and I was advertising happily for months while Woopza would assist me in any issues I had. Then suddenly during August I had some issues in my life which I had to deal with. I took a hiatus and was absent from HF for a while. When I come back on I see that Woopza has sold the project to King.

King did nothing wrong, and all the blame goes on Woopza, but I feel like for such a niche product having the exact same product would hurt both sides so it would be better if only one person runs it.

Here is the PM thread showing the deal as it went down.

And here is the blockchain transaction with the 1.2 BTC

<https://blockchain.info/tx/4df3babf8430b9c34f0806863e2a95a56a8b99d4c586ff26ed4911fd782a4bbd>

Armada - October 14, 2017, 3:45 pm

This section and what you gents get involved in never ceases to amaze me....

Good luck resolving this @OP.....

ziocanehf2017 - November 29, 2017, 5:01 am

I am sorry for this inconvenience.... but I have a question:

what happens to people who have already paid for the service? will the service be granted until the expiration date of the paid for service?

is there another way to extend the service and pay while the site is not reachable?

thank you,

VPN - December 18, 2017, 7:01 am

Okay listen it from my side now, please.

The product was coded by me and I have sold it to Krue for 3k$ + we dealt that I am having 10% of each sale for 6 months so basically it makes us a partner for that amount of time. I didn't hear from Krue for a long time and the licensing server of the project was down, tried to contact him over skype but no one could reach him so my old customers started to contact me about their sites being down one by one. I had 2 options in this situation.

- 1- Pay for a new domain, hosting and give away new copies of the system with the new licensing system (because there is no other way to change the licensing).
- 2- Let someone else to take care of the system.

I was planning on taking the first option but when you think about it, it requires too much time and my deal with Kruel is that I'm taking share of profit only, not dealing with any customers anymore. That's the main reason I sold the project in first; I don't have time for it. Also not to mention some of my customers have modified versions of the system for their own need so I had to re-work on those one by one (because I don't have the non-encoded copies of those modified versions).

Then I spoke with KinG and I did sold him the project for less amount because it would save my time aswell. My only fault is that I thought Kruel is gone for really long time / not intrested with continueing the project anymore.

I'm ready to find a way to make up for both you guys, sorry for the late reply. I was away for few months, still busy but you can find me around.

KING - December 18, 2017, 7:08 am

(Dec 18, 2017 08:01 AM)Woopza Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Okay listen it from my side now, please.

The product was coded by me and I have sold it to Kruel for 3k$ + we dealt that I am having 10% of each sale for 6 months so basically it makes us a partner for that amount of time. I didn't hear from Kruel for a long time and the licensing server of the project was down, tried to contact him over skype but no one could reach him so my old customers started to contact me about their sites being down one by one. I had 2 options in this situation.

1- Pay for a new domain, hosting and give away new copies of the system with the new licensing system (because there is no other way to change the licensing).

2- Let someone else to take care of the system.

I was planning on taking the first option but when you think about it, it requires too much time and my deal with Kruel is that I'm taking share of profit only, not dealing with any customers anymore. That's the main reason I sold the project in first; I don't have time for it. Also not to mention some of my customers have modified versions of the system for their own need so I had to re-work on those one by one (because I don't have the non-encoded copies of those modified versions).

Then I spoke with KinG and I did sold him the project for less amount because it would save my time aswell. My only fault is that I thought Kruel is gone for really long time / not intrested with continueing the project anymore.

I'm ready to find a way to make up for both you guys, sorry for the late reply. I was away for few months, still busy but you can find me around.

This case has been already solved, I won the case and now I'm officially owner of the project. I managed to get all system working without your help, Working on a re-branding and it will be released soon. You've fucked both of us though.

VPN - December 18, 2017, 7:24 am

(Dec 18, 2017 08:08 AM)KING Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This case has been already solved, I won the case and now I'm officially owner of the project. I managed to get all system working without your help, Working on a re-branding and it will be released soon. You've fucked both of us though.

Good luck with your project.

Meow - December 18, 2017, 3:19 pm

(Dec 18, 2017 08:01 AM)Woopza Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) My only fault is that I thought Kruel is gone for really long time / not intrested with continueing the project anymore.

That doesn't mean you had to fuck both of them over because you thought something.

VPN - December 19, 2017, 3:06 am

(Dec 18, 2017 04:19 PM)Meow? Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) That doesn't mean you had to fuck both of them over because you thought something.

You have to understand that I really didn't have the time to work on the project that's why it was passed away, and I couldn't let 10+ vpn services that run over VPN Engine shut down aswell.

Either way, I'm not the only responsible here about this thing. Kruel had to take care of the system after he bought it, he disappeared for a really long time and I supported the customers even though it wasn't a part of our deal. When the licensing server was down I had no other choices.

Ganja - December 19, 2017, 6:55 am

(Dec 19, 2017 04:06 AM)Woopza Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You have to understand that I really didn't have the time to work on the project that's why it was passed away, and I couldn't let 10+ vpn services that run over VPN Engine shut down aswell.

Either way, I'm not the only responsible here about this thing. Kruel had to take care of the system after he bought it, he disappeared for a really long time and I supported the customers even though it wasn't a part of our deal. When the licensing server was down I had no other choices.

As I understand it, that would be on Kruel, not you. You had no obligation to even respond to clients of Kruel. Even if Kruel where to fuck the entire project up, it would still be his to do with as he pleases.