Da? ?ae - October 15, 2017, 7:30 pm

Honestly I don't watch any vlogs other than car channels and car projects etc, but I actually watched the whole thing and you really have potential.

As a lot of others said stay consistent, and share your channel / videos out everywhere you can.

Left a comment and subscribed, will probably end up watching your newer videos too

Also, this video is fucking sick. You're gonna kill it <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=l4GalBpt6rc>

I really dont know how I can get more exposure to my channel tho?

Mr. Robot - October 15, 2017, 7:45 pm

(Oct 15, 2017 07:44 PM)Katana Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I really dont know how I can get more exposure to my channel tho?

You don't. Throw in some gaming videos related to games of the week - add in some discussions about relevant topics and while your views might grow but not your subs - it will give you more exposure and put you higher on the list for those who might sub coming from one video to the next.

You could always do a "Top 10 every day things you do online that put you at risk of being hacked"

1. Not updating your browser or computer.
2. Not closing your browser after you are done with it.
3. Using the same password on multiple sites (database breaches)
4. Letting programs run on startup
5. Allowing 3rd party programs to auto update.

Blahdeblah. Maybe I should do one.

Colab find youtubers in the area, run ads, post on facebook get people to share

It's really easy to go viral on facebook if the right person shares sheeit i'll probably have to post on facebook then. Do you recommend me running an advertisement for it?

(Oct 15, 2017 07:44 PM)Katana Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I really dont know how I can get more exposure to my channel tho?

The number one rule here is to keep your channel legit which I'm pretty sure you're already doing.

I'm not familiar with facebook ads and what not, but you can get a lot of exposure from the internet really. Your videos have such a hook to them from the beginning that most people are going to stay and watch, and then click through your other videos.

Like Mr. Robot said, gaming / discussion videos are great, really any category you're capable of doing, which you said yourself we gotta get out of our comfort zone. Make videos for everyone in tons of ways.

Playlists too, like your VLOGs, particular edits, gaming, etc
