Thread: [\[UID=2194640\] Nex+ - False Advertising - My Staff Censorship Allegations](#)

Faith Connors - October 26, 2017, 7:08 pm

User in Question - Nex+ - Profile: <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=2194640> - UID=2194640

This is in regards to his now-sold group "Limitless." All the data compiled will be relevant to this group, whether it be subforum content or other group-related threads. Other posts or threads written by Nex which are irrelevant will not be taken into account.

This Community Alert is released under the GPLv3 License and you are free to modify and claim it as your own at will as long as all changes from the original are documented.

Before mods get in here and get a big dick, a little fore-word to them.

Seriously, fuck off. I have a case against your corruption at the bottom of this as well. Want to warn me? Ban me? Sure, go ahead. Prove to everyone that you can't act mature when getting called out. Or when others call out Nex and you remove the posts without warning. And don't say it's because of sales trashing, because one member who did get warned states it wasn't a warning for sales trashing. I only have allegations and accusations. And in case you try to delete this thread like you deleted our posts, this time it'll be uploaded to GitHub at the bottom.

Alright, with all that meta shit out of the way, into the actual Community Alert.

Nex+ has been falsely advertising the content of his Forum and Subforum in order to gain buy-ins, or paid entry to his group. His original 75$ "Elite" buy-in thread shows a screenshot of numerous guides/tutorials as well as a few other smaller threads, mainly posted by him in order to convince people to spend 75$ on entry fees. The threads and guides/tutorials are advertised as guides we "will not find anywhere else."

Fig. A: The Thread Design
Warning, very large image.
Spoiler (Click to View)

As we can see, under the "What to expect from us" section, the guides are indeed in quote advertised as "not found anywhere else."

Now let's look at some of the content inside the subforum. I will only cover the actual tutorials posted in the thread design.

Sorry Nex+, I never bought into or officially joined your group during your ownership so I honestly cannot be fucked to accept your "No Leaking" rule, especially since I can't "leak" data which is already in the public domain.

Fig. B: Rooting Tutorial
Warning, relatively medium sized image.

Spoiler (Click to View)

Now, read it over. Seems to be pretty well written, right? Well, from an actual security enthusiast's perspective, there are many logical fallacies and incorrect terminology/explanations in this article, and even though I'm sure Nex+ would be more than capable of making these errors, I started to wonder whether it was copy/pasted.

And sure enough, word for word, it was.

The original source is from 2008. It is found here: http://vhack.blogspot.ca/2008/12/rooting_27.html
This article has been reposted around the internet a few times. Try searching google for the following:

Code intext:"Too often have I seen articles that claim"

Now, Nex+ added some formatting. Does this make it his intellectual property? Maybe. That's debatable, and I don't want to get into a debate, I just want to make my first point.

Is this guide found somewhere else? YES

Is Nex+ Falsely Advertising this content? YES

Fig. C: HTML Tutorial

Warning, not a huge image

Spoiler (Click to View)

This is where it will start to get juicy, but we're not at 100% full speed ahead yet, don't worry.

This guide seems to be pretty fucking useless. Look at any serious webdeveloper and ask them whether they think this would help anyone. Simply put, it won't. Very minimal explanation, doesn't even cover like 30% of HTML anyway. Just some useless bullshit. But that's not what I'm getting at yet.

Look closely at the source in the code box and you'll see someone by the name of ZeZiPo. After a little bit of searching (about 10 seconds) I came across a closed HF member who went by the name of ZeZiPo but had the name of Dead #62 here. Here is his profile link:

<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=8150> and his UID is 8150.

If you look through the threads, sure enough, much of it is very basic, either dealing with some sort of HTML or Batch. You can also see his old name popping up every so often. Maybe some quotes will show it as well. I'm just trying to push as much out as I can quickly. Don't be too lazy, do something about it.

Simply put: My theory is this tutorial was saved from a while ago and reposted here by Nex+. Nex+ claims to have asked for the owner's permission, but that would be difficult to determine if we don't have any contact information.

IF ANYONE WOULD LIKE TO TAKE ON THE TASK OF FINDING CONTACT INFORMATION, PLEASE DO SO.

Is this guide found somewhere else? NO
Is Nex+ Falsely Advertising this content? YES

My main argument here is that Nex+ may or may not have permission to post this, the quality of the tutorial is very very lacking, and better tutorials are found literally everywhere else. Even our relatively trashy HTML tutorial on this forum.

Now, this is where shit's gonna start getting really juicy.

Fig. D: SQL Injection Tutorial
Warning, again another medium sized image.
Spoiler (Click to View)

Frankly I don't see the need to post every part of the tutorial because it's long. Most of it's correct, but it's for very specific cases in SQL injection and doesn't give too much insight on the topic.

The juicy part is that at the bottom of this guide there was credits given, to a member on this forum. This member is DeLiiRiuM, Profile link:
<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=3666106>

Now, I have no beef with DeLiiRiuM. I've seen him post and honestly I kinda like him. I don't want him to get too involved in this.
I simply have one question for him and it is this: Did you or did you not give permission to Nex+ to post this content with your credits given in his subforum?

Oh, almost forgot. The source link: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5715367>

Is this guide found somewhere else? YES
Is Nex+ Falsely Advertising this content? YES

Whether or not DeLiiRiuM authorized that post isn't too relevant. I'm just getting at the fact that the post was made somewhere else, is found publically for free somewhere else, and that Nex+ Falsely Advertised it as PRemium and not seen anywhere else.

Now, the last bit I want to touch on, the juiciest part.

Fig. E: Cracking Accounts with Sentry
Warning, extremely juicy medium sized image below.
Spoiler (Click to View)

This guide is once again found on our beloved HackForums in a public subforum.

Credits were once again given to the original author, Regulus, Profile link:
<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=1680975>
Link: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5062627>

The reason I think this is the best part of the entire mess is that this guide was created in the name of another group, Red Lions.

Whether Nex+ asked permission or not isn't the main part of my concern, it's the advertising again, but I'd still like to ask Regulus the same question:

Did you or did you not give permission to Nex+ to post this content with your credits given in his subforum?

Is this guide found somewhere else? YES

Is Nex+ Falsely Advertising this content? YES

I'm going to call it quits here. Are there more guides in the subforum? Yes, at least four. Are they stolen? At least three of them, haven't gotten around to searching for the original sources but other members whom I will not list here claim to have ran the texts through plagiarism checkers and gotten positive results (as in he positively plagiarized.)

Oh, did I say I was quitting it there? Sorry, I meant only in regards to the subforum content. There's a few more things I'd like to touch on. Mainly "disappearing posts" and alleged corruption between staff and Nex+. These are mere allegations and do not reflect on factual evidence.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55901397#pid55901397>
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55919292#pid55919292>

Nebo claims his post was deleted. Why and how? Why didn't he get warned?

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55917112#pid55917112>

This user also claims to have had posts delted. This time he was warned. Strange.

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55921532#pid55921532>

Another victim of blatant censorship, this time pointing at a specific Staff Member. But also the warn reason, low quality. Isn't it strange that staff acknowledged it wasn't sales trashing?

My posts have been removed and I do not have screenshots or other data but I do have a member who I can bring in as a witness with PM evidence to prove that they saw my posts get deleted.

I'll leave everything at this.

This is not to sales trash or ask for refunds (I did not buy-in) only to bring awareness to a false advertising scheme and my allegations against corrupt staff members. It's not a deal dispute, only a community alert.

Oh, before I forget, like I said I'd upload to GitHub in the case of the deletion of this thread.

Here: <https://gist.github.com/faithconnors/9310923068ff1a68bd63d4c0ef5294a6>

Thank you all, read it, come up with your own conclusions, and have a nice day.

I hope this won't hurt 0100 though since he wasn't involved. Leak rule doesn't apply for me, didn't pay any buy-in and I didn't agree to anything.

This Community Alert is legitimate. I almost paid $75 to join the sub-forum when he offered it for Pentesting.

In the Pentesting thread all it said was, "Here's an article I found." and it linked to Amazon books for sale. -_-

Also I only mentioned posts on sales threads. His original info and recruitment threads I had posts deleted, which I don't have evidence for.

I stand by my original statement of false advertising. I did not make any purchases or meet anyone who has, therefore, I am not in any position to make a deal dispute claiming he is a scammer. If anyone would like to step up with a deal dispute they are free to do so.

KING - October 26, 2017, 7:55 pm

Nex+ is known for his cheap acts. Sometimes he's a businessman, Sometimes professional BTC gambler, And sometimes he's selling out group memberships and then rebrand and kick all members.

Once upon time he was selling a BTC gambling guide with promise to be making atleast $100-$200 for $75 maybe I don't really remember exact details because it's been long time. It was a lie, that guide didn't made me anything and I had to file a scam report to get my money back from him. Mainly he targets new members who don't know him well. I'm glad you exposed his new group scheme. HF staff isn't bad, Try explaining your point of view in PM and they'll sure take step. If you have any complains about them you can simply PM Omni.

my issue was there was no warning on three seperate occassions my posts have been deleted and there is no evidence of the deletion.

i dont know which staff member it was, but one user in one of the posts i provided explicitly stated who the member was and what the warning was for, which doesn't add up for "sales trashing" when there is a specific reason to warn for sales trashing iirc.

it could be three, it could just be one. who knows. i sure fucking dont but at least this will bring attention to that problem.

Wires - October 26, 2017, 8:12 pm

Agree with most of the things you said, although more fool anyone that buys into a group without doing research on the group's owner/leader. Anyone with half of brain would of realised within a minute and 20 seconds of looking into Nex that he picks up groups and drops them, it's simply business to him without any care in the world. That's the problem with HF members, they expect to be babied. There's a bunch of tools (including common sense) you can use to analyze a person on here, a massive red warning on every page wouldn't even stop people falling for shit like this.

I suppose.

I'll admit fault here.

But I'm gonna keep it in the post to keep the drama going.

Night Fury - October 26, 2017, 8:16 pm

It's fucking retarded if the "sales trashing" card is pulled for anything in the group section.

To try to understand why posts were getting removed, I reached out to Eagle. I believe that because Eagle is a good staff member, he would be straightforward with me. I asked Eagle if we could hide behind the shield of sales trashing by simply adding a $1 fee to joining a group. Nex was successfully getting posts deleted that were criticizing his group, so maybe to display the absurdity of the system, I could add a $1 fee to my group to censor any potential criticism. He told me that wouldn't work.

However, when it came to Nex, Minimalist showed that he had a soft spot for Nex and would delete any harsh criticism on his thread....for a while. I think it eventually stopped because the roasts just continued to pile on and on. Nex should know that when you're a piece of shit, people are going to call you out. The actions by Minimalist of deleting critical posts potentially enabled Nex to squeeze a few more dollars out of the community before he eventually sold. What a shame.

By the way, I have what Nebo wrote before it was deleted:

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Quote: (Sep 20, 2017 01:50 PM)Nebo Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have no beef with you however as the last couple of days I have been just spectating this subforum so let me raise some questions and hopefully you could provide some constructive feedback and perhaps explain it a bit better since your actions leave me a bit confused.

So my question to you is: What is worth $75 in your group?

Let me explain the logic behind my question so you don't mistake me for some self-conceited prick and a "hater".

UB looks decent at best, I am not saying it is awful but it is just a mediocre non-animated userbar. Group GFX looks nice in the larger HD version but the UB just looks messy.

Group does not have a lot of HQ members so it is not even reputable or well known on HF. It certainly does not have too much prestige and neither do you have any decent reputation within the community.

A few days ago the group was up for sale. Now it is no longer for sale yet here we have outrageously overpriced buy-ins, $75. You are someone who is known to sell groups like cabbages. What prevents you from selling the group after a week and screwing over people that paid for the buy-in? Nothing, actually.

You speak of investment opportunities and advice. Who is the one giving such advice? You are a person who resells HF groups and is trying everything you can to milk HF community out of money, it is pretty damn obvious you don't have a whole lot of advice to give.

Your tutorials? Very basic knowledge at best as far as I can see. These tutorials of yours do not contain any deep knowledge. You wrote a few tutorials on basic stuff and even that is mediocre knowledge.

You however have a few good ones, the psychology and business one is nice. Can't say that about the ones you mentioned in the thread. I wonder why instead of mentioning the business tutorial you decided to mention basic generic knowledge tutorials.

HTML? I was 10 when I learned the basics of HTML and it is extremely easy to pick up for anyone. There are tons of free tutorials on HTML that are more in-depth and quite better than yours. Anyone who even remotely cares for coding probably knows basic HTML. What is the target audience, who is here on HF to learn basic HTML? Noone, atleast noone smart.

Rooting? A tutorial on rooting is essentially a flawed idea since rooting depends a lot on the phone model and firmware.

Cracking, SQL Injection - just entry level stuff. Again, mediocre tutorials and subpar knowledge. Cracking is not just about SentryMBA. There is a lot more to speak about. You did not even mention OCR anywhere.

You probably paid a lot for thread design however this truly looks lackluster. The artist put in an effort, I can commend that, thread GFX are nice.

You jump around different areas and it can be seen from your tutorials. One is on HTML, rest are on Cracking, Pentesting, Rooting. You wrote a few tutorials on the very basics. Do you have any advanced knowledge in anything? Just pick a single area of expertise and focus, it really would do you good.

To conclude this, I am sorry but I truly do not see where you got the $75 price from. You got nothing much to justify such a price other than your promise of "premium tutorials and products" and that promise is not worth a lot since your words are not worth a lot by themselves. I think I saw someone from your group write "I feel so dirty being in Nex's group". That says a lot about your reputation and the value behind your "promises". That is about it.

Have a nice day. Cheers.

Even though Minimalist told me Nebo's claims were "unjust," it looks like Nebo was right!

To try to understand why posts were getting removed, I reached out to Eagle. I believe that because Eagle is a good staff member, he would be straightforward with me. I asked Eagle if we could hide behind the shield of sales trashing by simply adding a $1 fee to joining a group. Nex was successfully getting posts deleted that were criticizing his group, so maybe to display the absurdity of the system, I could add a $1 fee to my group to censor any potential criticism. He told me that wouldn't work.

However, when it came to Nex, Minimalist showed that he had a soft spot for Nex and would delete any harsh criticism on his thread....for a while. I think it eventually stopped because the roasts just continued to pile on and on. Nex should know that when you're a piece of shit, people are going to call you out. The actions by Minimalist of deleting critical posts potentially enabled Nex to squeeze a few more dollars out of the community before he eventually sold. What a shame.

By the way, I have what Nebo wrote before it was deleted:

I read Nebo's post and it seems to address good points, but the best part of his post was that he assumed Nex wrote those tutorials and that they were in some sense original. In fact, they were copied and pasted from this EXACT forum as indicated. xD

I'd like to address the staff covering up his ass accusation that continues to be prevalent. As someone who is outwardly vocal of Nex+ and other highly regarded members on this forum, I've often had many of my posts deleted/warned. It's a very fine line when you're communicating over the internet via text. For example, some users may see my posting on Mr. Robot's threads as harassment, but if you go through all my posts you'll see I communicate like that with most individuals.

When someone like Nex+ reports posts that are actual sales trashing posts, I'm sure staff do delete them. But I think staff have become so accustomed to seeing Nex+ reporting posts that any of them on his sales threads will be deleted. I had a few posts on his threads as well advertising that I would like to purchase multiple licenses of his $40 buy in to resale at a higher price, however that was deleted. Some people may see that as trolling, however I see it as an investment (lucky I didn't have the chance to execute, however it was still an investment) because he eluded to limited spots.

I disagree with both of these statements, and I've outlined why below:

1. The way that Nex has advertised his product was deliberately misleading with the intention to maximise his buy-ins. Having noted this, calling him out for it is NOT sales trashing, it is simply stating the facts for potential customers to see. The primary intention is not to ruin his sales, rather to educate members about what they are buying. It's the equivalent of pointing out the fine print in a shitty contract to someone who's about to sign. If they're happy with the product, they'll still purchase it.

2. I believe staff members do have a 'soft corner' for users here. After all, they're human like the rest of us, and they'll be subject to the same human emotions that everyone feels, regardless of position.

I think it's only known amongst the community of HackForums that has been around for a while and seen Nex take these actions. If not, it's known about the general behaviour of these so-called 'entrepreneurs'.

Really? It's a "pure violation"? Nebo didn't say it was a shit product or flame Nex in any way. He raised questions, as any consumer should, about why the cost was so high. Given that he has some experience in the field of topics that Nex said he would teach, and that he's familiar with Nex's past public behavior, he has the right to ask those questions. Wouldn't someone that believed in what they were selling simply look at that as an opportunity to clear up any hesitations about their product? He provided Nex with a platform to provide assurance that his product wasn't shit, but Nex decided to say instead that he didn't care what Nebo had to say. That post from Nex was deleted as well to cover his tracks. Actually, both Nebo's questions and Nex's response to Nebo speak volumes about what any potential consumer may experience when dealing with Nex.

Staff are not perfect human beings without fault. Why suck their dicks like that?

Overall, I think Minimalist is pretty good at being a staff member, but his assistance for Nex in removing any valid criticism from his thread was pretty shitty, if not unethical as well.

Well..... I feel extremely sorry for anyone that even purchased a buy-in to his group let alone the sub forums. It's clear that he is a bit of a fraudster and wanted some extra money therefore decided to take advantage and start manipulating users with his position in the forum and his status. I personally believe anyone who even remotely vouched for Nex+ in his thread should also be held accountable for peoples loses. There were people who claimed that they had been given access and/or purchased into the forum and saw the content provided and guaranteed the content was top notch and was not even to be seen previously on the internet; hearing that should have just put people off this as a whole because we all know documents and programs get leaked daily and there is no way to prevent this from happening.

A list of people who vouched for Nex+ and seem to be his friend at the time of this post:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55890170#pid55890170>

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049&pid=55890884#pid55890884>

If I am not mistaken. buddy vouching isn't allowed, especially when the OP has stolen from people. This could potentially fall under scamming help.

Let's take for example a little patch out of his original buy-in thread (<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5721049>) and see if we can find anything correlating to claim the things provided within the group were 100% unique and "never to be seen elsewhere". Upon opening the initial thread you will see that there is a pretty nice thread design and seems to look very informative in general.

The first thing your eye will catch is the following quote:

Quote:A private subforum packed full of premium tutorials that you will not find elsewhere.

- <https://imgur.com/a/5yfQQ>

Seems pretty interesting for the first time, sort of gives you a little feeling that you want to find out more and if it actually is true could probably benefit you a lot whether it be educational purposes or financial purposes, after all, that is how he's made everything sound. That's the norm to make people feel engaged.

Now as you may know, Nex+ decided to sell the group off to a new member who has kindly let everyone join for a short period just until everything is rebranded and ready to be turned into something more special. With this, we were also allowed to access the sub forum which Nex was selling buy-ins for and this contained every bit of information he was advertising.

Here is a thread that was posted in the sub forum:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5720768> [members who aren't in the group won't be able to see it] - <https://imgur.com/a/VNP5a>

The thread is all around HMTL and how to start using it, but when you look at the thread it's just a blob of code that he requests you put into notepad..... Could someone care to explain how this is tutoring someone to learn the basics of HTML? No? You cannot. This is a pure copy and paste thread with no intent to provide knowledge. So yeah that; the first thread that doesn't match up with his guaranteed specifications for this sub forum, how many more will we find.....

Moving onto another thread at random, I come across one with the title "The doxing bible" -

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5684647> [again members who aren't in the group cannot see it] - <https://imgur.com/a/efgpa> - this seemed rather nice again. But for some reason it seemed like I had heard about this particular book elsewhere so I decided to do a quick google search with the following text "site:hackforums.net The doxing bible" and came across this thread <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4763102>, seems pretty coincidental, right?

After downloading the ebook I ended up seeing that the text was exactly the same to Nex's thread except a few words were put into an article spinner, pretty common sense because when I re tracked it, the results were something like "14% plagiarized and 86% unique" which isn't even possible. Just so you don't claim Nex+ posted this thread first you can check he created the thread on 08/02/2017 whereas the other creator posted his back in 2015. Again, this isn't what Nex+ was advertising, he was clearly offering "never seen before content" which is a lie and should be a punishable offence in my book.

I could potentially go on and on about how he falsly advertised a product/service but I guess I would be wasting my time because 75% of this forum already know this kid spews bullshit and has nothing better to do with his life than rip people off. The content he provided was nothing but utter bullshit and trash, which isn't even worth $2. He stole a few hundred from members and that is not acceptable under any circumstances. Anyone who was scammed by him in this manor, I would advise you to create a deal dispute or take this up with the administrator, hopefully something can be done about this crap.

Quote:I have no beef with you however as the last couple of days I have been just spectating this subforum so let me raise some questions and hopefully you could provide some constructive feedback and perhaps explain it a bit better since your actions leave me a bit confused.

So my question to you is: What is worth $75 in your group?

Let me explain the logic behind my question so you don't mistake me for some self-conceited prick and a "hater".

UB looks decent at best, I am not saying it is awful but it is just a mediocre non-animated userbar. Group GFX looks nice in the larger HD version but the UB just looks messy.

Group does not have a lot of HQ members so it is not even reputable or well known on HF. It certainly does not have too much prestige and neither do you have any decent reputation within the community.

A few days ago the group was up for sale. Now it is no longer for sale yet here we have outrageously overpriced buy-ins, $75. You are someone who is known to sell groups like cabbages. What prevents you from selling the group after a week and screwing over people that paid for the buy-in? Nothing, actually.

You speak of investment opportunities and advice. Who is the one giving such advice? You are a person who resells HF groups and is trying everything you can to milk HF community out of money, it is pretty damn obvious you don't have a whole lot of advice to give.

Your tutorials? Very basic knowledge at best as far as I can see. These tutorials of yours do not contain any deep knowledge. You wrote a few tutorials on basic stuff and even that is mediocre knowledge.

You however have a few good ones, the psychology and business one is nice. Can't say that about the ones you mentioned in the thread. I wonder why instead of mentioning the business tutorial you decided to mention basic generic knowledge tutorials.

HTML? I was 10 when I learned the basics of HTML and it is extremely easy to pick up for anyone. There are tons of free tutorials on HTML that are more in-depth and quite better than yours. Anyone who even remotely cares for coding probably knows basic HTML. What is the target audience, who is here on HF to learn basic HTML? Noone, atleast noone smart.

Rooting? A tutorial on rooting is essentially a flawed idea since rooting depends a lot on the phone model and firmware.

Cracking, SQL Injection - just entry level stuff. Again, mediocre tutorials and subpar knowledge. Cracking is not just about SentryMBA. There is a lot more to speak about. You did not even mention OCR anywhere.

You probably paid a lot for thread design however this truly looks lackluster. The artist put in an effort, I can commend that, thread GFX are nice.

You jump around different areas and it can be seen from your tutorials. One is on HTML, rest are on Cracking, Pentesting, Rooting. You wrote a few tutorials on the very basics. Do you have any advanced knowledge in anything? Just pick a single area of expertise and focus, it really would do you good.

To conclude this, I am sorry but I truly do not see where you got the $75 price from. You got nothing much to justify such a price other than your promise of "premium tutorials and products" and that promise is not worth a lot since your words are not worth a lot by themselves. I think I saw someone from your group write "I feel so dirty being in Nex's group". That says a lot about your reputation and the value behind your "promises". That is about it.

Have a nice day. Cheers.

Where did the post go that very respectfully critiqued Nex's group?

Did not feel that personal attacks and unjust criticism of content that the user hasn't seen contributed much to the thread.

It gave a chance for Nex to defend himself. Do you see the negative perception that Nex has already garnered on the forum? He doesn't rack up 12 votes with a 2-star average by doing something right. The user addressed valid concerns that Nex should defend. It helps the buyer better understand what they're getting.

To pick one good example: "What prevents you from selling the group after a week and screwing over people that paid for the buy-in?"

Nebo raised valid concerns that any buyer should be aware of before giving Nex $75. Again, personal attacks and it's unfair to out him just because of previous encounters.

Quote:Even though Minimalist told me Nebo's claims were "unjust," it looks like Nebo was right!

Correct about his claims or correct about his opinion that Nex+ is a bad person? With the leaked threads, his opinion about the product not justifying the price is probably correct, but we act on reports objectively. Realize that staff members go through dozens if not hundreds of reports every day and that number only grows as we look into specialized cases like this one. Personal jabs will be removed as I can't act on emotion. Nex+ and I lack any history past whatever led me to add reputation to his account nearly three years ago.

"Sir, you're applying to be a driver for our company, but your record shows that you have 15 previous DUIs. What's to say you won't drive under the influence again?"

"Well, Minimalist said that those don't matter because they were in the past. I can't believe you'd criticize me for my repeated past behavior!"

Nex's behavior proved to have not change, yet again, with this most recent sale.

If he comes back again, are you planning to act the same way by defending him at all costs? How much proof do you need to know that Nex is a snake-oil salesman?

Quote:3. The belief that the content within the subforum is lacklustre...before reading any of it.

A valid point by Nebo that was proven to be true. He was questioning how Nex could justify the price given what he was advertising. Nex gave an overview of what he was selling. He left things as vague as possible so you wouldn't know what you were buying. Why wouldn't he go into more detail about what he was selling? Why would he be upset that someone asks for more information before dropping $75 on a spot in his group? Maybe it's because what he was selling was shit.

Quote:All in all, these were opinions that, in the definition of the word...were subjective. No objective looks at the content or the value proposition of the group. It'd have been a different story if a customer shared a review.

It would be a definite violation if he said: "Guys! Don't buy into this! Nex's courses are really shitty!" But he didn't say that. He presented valid questions in a relatively polite manner. Maybe Nebo would have actually bought in if he got a proper response? You just want him to throw $75 at Nex and hope that Nex's course is going to be mind-blowing in every way imaginable? Are we supposed to base our purchases on blind faith alone? It sounds like that's what you're supporting: blind faith that Nex is of great character and actually has material worth a $75 fee that is awaiting anyone who purchases a spot in his group.

Quote:Not sure how you came to that conclusion.

It's easy to form that conclusion when you seem to continually be the one that's always there to protect any criticism directed towards Nex. It always seemed to be your name that would be behind the censorship.

Maybe you guys have a thing for each other? If that's the case, I get it: it's cool. You can like another man in 2017; you'll be just fine. Just let us know, homie. If we know, then your actions make a lot more sense to everyone.

Correct on both counts. I'm sure you're a super-busy person with all those reports coming in, but reports that Nex filed always seemed to be acted on rather quickly. Did you prioritize his reports?

This thread was created because people are trying to understand the censorship taking place in their community.

I think people would forgive you if you just owned up to your mistakes. You did some fucked-up shit that aided Nex in squeezing more money out of the community. If you own up to it and assure people you won't censor valid concerns like that again, I'm sure that a lot of people will be able to look past this and move on.

If I am not mistaken. buddy vouching isn't allowed, especially when the OP has stolen from people. This could potentially fall under scamming help.

I would say add these buddies of Nex+ also in thread. Atleast people will have a little fear before giving away fake vouches for shit products.. ?

All of this just goes to show that you should do your research before buying in to any sort of group. I disagree, it's more a reflection on products being sold here than a reflection on groups. Nex+ is not marketing his group membership, he is advertising the contents within the group.

But isn't that the same thing? Making it seem like the buy-in is worth it, because of the contents in the sub-forum?

Well I don't think so. In the past, people have bought into groups for the userbar, not the actual subforum content. Nex+ markets the group as a trove of information, which you will get access to upon purchase, as opposed to just being in a group.

Don't really understand why this thread was closed, and not junked/posts deleted/warnings issued/only closed.

Thank you for showing the community who you truly are, Minimalist. You've had adequate time to respond to my comment, but your silence alone speaks volumes itself.

As far as to why Minimalist truly did censor a lot of Nex's criticism, I don't think we can completely rule out that those two may have a secret gay love affair.

Another possible scenario is that Minimalist was given a cut of the sales by Nex for helping to remove any criticism. With good reason, I don't think that scenario can be completely ruled out either.

Keep in mind, this one case does not mean that all members of staff are bad.

For any members that are looking for any ethical staff to reach out to, I'd recommend contacting either Eagle 95 or Skorp.

Those two have no apparent conflict of interest between their duties as staff and their activity on this forum.

Thanks to Faith Connors for opening this thread. I believe it allowed us to successfully put a spotlight on Minimalist's shitty and unethical behavior.
