Thread: Who's waiting to get the iPhone X

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 5:04 am

I'm a bit skeptical over whether or not to grab an iPhone X when they're released. The $1000 price tag and possible glitches are of course the cons but the phone does look pretty badass with good looking specs. Thoughts on this folks? Will you be upgrading or no?

Levi - October 28, 2017, 5:06 am

Too poor for that shit family

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 5:09 am

Lol, they do installment payments like any other phone they have had in the past.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 5:31 am

Good point. eBay will be lit with these things.

Cooligan - October 28, 2017, 8:44 am

In my opinion it's the exact same thing as the 8.

I watched a couple comparison videos and they literally list off the same features for both phones, just one's a little bigger and has a different screen design (the X).

Personally I like the flat, perfect rectangle iPhone screens have always been so when I saw that they changed it, it was honestly kind of a turn off for me.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 10:38 am

The iPhoneX physical features are much different than the 8. The 8 seems just about exactly like the 7 Plus or 7. The X rocks the full display with facial recognition which is a bit better then the fingerprint imo. Dunno we'll see. I like the wifi charging feature but this takes away from using your phone while charging for the most part.

wololokek - October 28, 2017, 12:31 pm

Next iphone im getting is probably going to be a 6s. I am too retarded to not drop it and too poor to fix it

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 12:46 pm

Lmao. Good points. I barely had my iPhone 7 plus fall from about a foot and the screen cracked easily. Phone cases are good but I hear ya. I think I'll upgrade to the iPhone X but I'll stick with that phone until an insanely fierce step ahead in technology appears.

webdev77 - October 28, 2017, 12:48 pm

If I'm going to spend over $1000 on a phone, it would probably be the Red Hydrogen One. At least I could use that as a replacement for a mirrorless DSLR camera that would already cost about as much.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 12:52 pm

Good point. Prices on these devices including xBox's and so on keep increasing with little hardware upgrades makes for a good point. We'll see. I'm on the fence about upgrading for now. However, my cracked 7 plus kinda pisses me off so I probably will just to eliminate that non sense overall. I can handle the payments without a problem but I guess I'll wait and see.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 1:01 pm

Could be. I've tried to get into Android but I guess ya can't teach an old dog new tricks. Thanks to my sister I learned to bypass an Android gmail set up though. Lol

Do you really think Apple would release something that doesn't work? Apple would never risk that.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 28, 2017, 1:29 pm

Apple has pushed product out the door before it has been fully tested leading to hardware issues and such. Examples are exploding batteries and as of recent the iPhone 8's screen splitting apart from the base of the phone.

I'm not going to buy it. For me where I live it costs $1600 USD which I can not see myself spending on a phone

I mean, It's a goddamn phone, what are you going to do on it? Facebook? Watch Youtube?

Is that worth the $1000+ pricetag? So you can use facebook 1 second faster than anyone else?

Samsung and Intel stand to make a lot off the iPhone as well. Special pricing increase on screen panels and modems because Apple is having difficulty sourcing them elsewhere. Law suits against Qualcomm are making it hard for Apple to add things like gigabit LTE support.

Authorized Retailer - October 28, 2017, 1:36 pm

One of the craziest things about apple to me, is that they don't give any cheaper prices to retailers. Every time AT&T, Sprint, or any other company sells a physical phone, they pay apple full retail on the device. There's no price cut like there is with any and every other product.

Wavy Pope - October 28, 2017, 1:38 pm

I wanted to switch back to the Apple ecosystem because everyone in my vicinity is using iMessage. Apple shills aren't going anywhere.

That's fine to think that, but you really should try and post constructive points instead of fanboying. I personally prefer Oreo to iOS, but that's not the point. iPhones are not crap. They are pretty good phones and I don't think anyone can really dispute that using any form of rational reasoning. Would I buy one? Absolutely not, but just yelling an opinion with no reason doesn't exactly change anyone's opinion.

I 100% agree with that. When I'm not at work I rely on my device for just about everything all the way to banking without the need for anti virus software on my phone.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - October 31, 2017, 2:22 pm

Yeah given that my iPhone 7 Plus has a crack in it I'll be upgrading to the iPhone X. A good point was made in this thread that had the fact of how often and how much we use our devices on a daily basis. I'll report back with how good the iPhone X is.

I never liked iPhone or any Apple product for that matter.

I have load of reasons for it but deep down I just hate how much they restrict you in everything.

And I find the price tag absolutely unacceptable. I am way happier with Android, so no, I won't be getting it.

Gaming. - November 3, 2017, 1:17 pm

I'm willing to pay the price however I just find the design of the Iphone X really ugly.

It doesn't even have my favourite colour no more #gold - that sucks.

i love it, just takes some getting used to because of the size as i came from the 6s. Its literally the same phone as the x hardware wise it just has a home button, I didn't like how you had to swipe for certain things on the X that the home button could do. Plus i find the fingerprint much more convenient for stuff then unlocking with your face.

The Avengers - November 4, 2017, 9:09 am

I had an iPhone 8 plus preordered but canceled it a week and a half before it released because I want the iPhone X. I wouldn't recommend blowing any money on either iPhone's if you have a 7plus has the 8plus is really a 7s and the iPhone X is just insanely overkill.

I find this argument stupid, Apple or Samsung make something first and suddenly no other phone is allowed to do it or else it's 'copying'. It'll come sooner or later on both phones so who cares. All it comes down to in the end is what OS you want.

Probably will be similar to iPhone X now that they see they can charge that much

Yous - November 5, 2017, 3:37 pm

While everyone is distracted with the X I snagged a deal on the 8 which is almost the same thing but waaay cheaper lol.

NieR - November 5, 2017, 3:43 pm

I don't see the worth in dropping 1k on a phone, especially when it's the iphone where they're going to be releasing another version of the phone not too far into the future.

FakeTrumpTweetsiOSApp - November 9, 2017, 7:44 pm

Yeah. As I noted before the drop test was horrible for the phone which would def need a decent (expensive) case as with any other iPhone taking away it's impressive look on its own. I'm still on the fence but the OS for iPhones are way better imo.

wolfy1994 - November 9, 2017, 10:19 pm

I will hopefully be upgrading. I like how it feels in my hands. I have stuck with a 5s because its so small. I hate the larger "phablet" phones. the Iphone x is small, but appears larger given the outward screen space.

Aveling - November 10, 2017, 6:41 am

The device is way to expensive, I've heard from a radio station that a group of people dissembled the iPhone X to actually see how much the parts are worth that are in the device and they came with a sum around 310 euros. That's the same as I bought my Lenovo P2 from a mid-range Android device.. No way I'm going to buy it.

The device looks great, the specs are great but the price is just way to high for me.
