Thread: i want to cross the border

Airness - October 29, 2017, 4:06 pm

alright, i'm not illegal or anything. I'm legal in both USA and Mexico. i want to cross the border when i turn maybe 18, im 14 right now. I just want to cross it as i want to see how it is, most my uncle and my dad crossed the border at that age. i know it sounds stupid but it's just for experience i guess.

Anyways my question is, would i go to jail even if i'm legal in both countries? If so i guess i won't, i want to have a clean record.

Also before you go commenting about being Mexican and adding racist comments, i just want this to be a thread about a question. Not a insult thread.Thanks

I'm not sure about Mexico. It's different than Canada. All you need for Canada is a birth certificate from the US or a passport.

From a simple Google search, it seems that you can go in and out as long as you can prove you are a resident of the United States, not a citizen. There also seems to be a port of entry where you don't even have to speak to anyone.

well i want to cross it like an illegal, climbing over.

Rezpy - October 29, 2017, 4:09 pm

Yes you will, you are legally required to get access from a Border Patrol officer to enter the country, regardless of status.

B FOR BADASS - October 29, 2017, 4:10 pm

I suggest use the legal border entry point to move. Going and crossing the border in a non appropriate fashion may lead to arrest if caught.

Airness - October 29, 2017, 4:11 pm

i guess i will have to rethink this haha, thanks for everything guys

Why would you do that if you can go there on legal grounds?

most my family crossed, i want to see how it is like.

$ZEUS - October 29, 2017, 4:17 pm

Yes, you'll be arrested. It has to be documented that you're crossing. If you still choose to do so, invest in a good coyote.

If you do it, then please run in zig-zag and yell 'You can't hit me, you redneck-fucks!'

I heard that it increases your chances of entering the states by 159%.

Lord... Getting mixed in with the cartels is not something you should aim for.

That's how you get shot OP good luck though

Grey - October 29, 2017, 4:44 pm

If you're legal in both countries and plan on crossing the border by land and not plane, you can get a free passport. If you plan on taking a plane, I believe the passport fee is $100.

It's only free if you're traveling via land and not air.

No. You have to apply for one like you normally would beforehand.

I just looked it up again. It's actually $30 compared to the $110 for the standard passport.

That's not at all how it works, but okay.

Cool - October 29, 2017, 6:33 pm

If you just want to "see how it is" just go to this amusement park and avoid the risk of getting shot by a border patrol officer, don't be stupid please.

This is probably the smartest way of going at it. You won't have to pay for a decent coyote that will just abandon you in the desert and not have to worry about redneck vigilantes shooting at you or some other freaky shit.

Hey bud,

I'm mexican american aswell. I don't believe crossing the border is something you want to do, without going through customs. It's still a greata atmosphere (depending where you go in mexico)

DuelPit - November 8, 2017, 8:45 am

If you're legal in both countries you shouldn't have a problem crossing the border.

DrakesGhostWriter - November 8, 2017, 12:34 pm

lol bro idk if this is a serious post or not, but if you try to cross it illegally even if youre legal, im pretty sure youll get into a ton of trouble

Mr. Kim - November 8, 2017, 2:03 pm

You most defiantly will get in trouble if you get caught. If doesn't matter if you're legal, you still need to go through customs bro. Having legal status doesn't mean you can just go across the border whenever you want.

Also I love how you think it's a fun little family tradition to break US immigration laws. That's really fucking cool of you bro. You're kinda the reason people like Donald Trump end up president. I'm not saying "Go back to Mexico!", but it's not just a fun little time passer to break our federal laws.

Pretty confident they don't shoot at illegals, they just send them back over to Mexico.

F?cqlle?? - November 8, 2017, 2:15 pm

Crossing the border that way can be very dangerous. People regularly get raped, robbed, or murdered (or a combination of the 3).

Good luck.
