Thread: I'm fuckin sick and tired of all the shitty methods that "cut the bullshit."

Televisor - November 8, 2017, 10:01 am

Fuck off, for fuck's sake, we know your method is shit, we know it won't work, we know you're trying to lure in gullible customers with your saturated method. I honestly don't know why anyone on HF falls for it, you can't expect someone to sell a method that makes more money than its worth even if its "not a saturatable market." Like nigga; come on. Your method is shit, you're shit for selling a shit method and this place would be MUCH better if we "CUT THE CRAP AND" got rid of those bad threads and bad products.

Rant over. What do you feel, HF?

Bombaclut - November 8, 2017, 10:03 am

We all know this? Are you positive?

I have seen threads with the title you're talking about make 4 or more sales a day for like a month straight.

Threads like these are made but people don't care. So you're wasting your time.

They make the sales, but how many people manage to make an income from those methods for more than a month straight? Think about it. Why would people sell a method if there is no gain from it? There might be a small profit in the short term, but in the long term they've undermined their so-called "working method" due to saturating it.

It just doesn't make sense.

Exactly my point.

You making this thread doesn't prevent sales from happening. As far as I'm aware, they will continue.

Let's be honest, how many members who have been here longer than 1 month has bought an ebook? Maybe 10 at the most.

People google money making solutions and get the sales threads in the search and they are fooled by the vouches and quality design. We cannot prevent this because if we do it's classed as marketplace abuse or whatever bullshit real.

This is when the mindset of many regular HF users need to turn against those people trying to make a quick buck with their old methods. They've adulterated the premium sellers section for way too long, it's only downhill from here if they keep on doing this. The marketplace has been plagued for the past, what, five to seven years with those threads?

I know this is pointless, but that's the exact point of a rant. I just wanted to get my thoughts across what I felt about those threads.

EDIT: I also say this because I browse the PSS looking for good deals on stuff that'd usually be more expensive otherwise (subscriptions, etc.) and seeing those threads plague every page just pisses me off.

Donald Trump Jr. - November 8, 2017, 10:11 am

I'm not against you and I genuinely support your movement. I just don't feel we have a voice opposed to other people. I don't want to be harsh at all, it wouldn't be fair to say some people sell bullshit methods because I know that Chief Bromden & Sonex have legitimate methods as I've purchased both and seen a few previews.

Even if those methods work, how long would they work for? As more and more people buy, no matter what method you use it's going to get more and more saturated eventually. People buy into them thinking they'd be long-term income streams when in reality they're more short term. If you actually do profit, it won't be for long. ?

I'm waiting on the method that is to get a random method and then sell it on hf.

Captain P. - November 8, 2017, 10:16 am

I wanted to build a big thread addressing this problem. It's extremely easy to fake payment proof, besides that it never proves that it actually comes from the method itself.

Next to all of that, money doesn't come easy, not like 500$ a day bullshit, you have to build up slowly and you'll grow.

I tried to make a report yesterday on faking payment proof, you can see in this thread.

As you can see, some people bought it already after I continued to show more fake proof.

Easy as it comes, all you do is disconnect your internet settings and press the refresh button. As you're not connected, you can't refresh.

Maybe my English is too broken. What I am trying to say, is that there are about 20-25 ebooks right now that are pretty identical. They have similar titles and similar sales pitch. The sales pitch they use is kinda like that: "Are you tired of getting scammed by ebook sellers? I know how that feels because I have been there. It's awful and that is why I decided to put a good product in the market. Autopilot, overnight, 24/7 support, 500 a day, refund if not satisfied. Buy now $39.99". They are all the same. Some sales pitches are lengthier, but still they deliver the same message.

What I don't understand, is how is it possible to make money when your presentation is generic? People say that ebook sellers make money, I think most of them make some initial sales thanks to people that are willing to risk their money for fresh products with no reviews, and thats it. After the initial hype is gone, the sales are diminished. And that is why you see constantly new ebooks getting in the market.
