Thread: Let the BCH die.

Bombaclut - November 13, 2017, 2:43 pm

Really, there's no need to try. You saw a parabolic rise, you think you missed the boat, ok. It's not gonna happen again. Lots of people have put a lot of money for that rise to happen, they want their money back now, and they will dump on you at every level. Like right now, a straight 300usd dump in this shit's last attempt to resurrect. But go ahead & buy the debt of those who haven't sold in time, & pray for another rise to buy yours.

..or leave that crap alone and stop compromising the Bitcoin. That's for the few non-asian who think it's still a good idea.

When I saw your thread I immediately went to look your reputation if Orgy gave you a -4 for mentioning BCH as bad coin, turns out he did, hahaha I love when he gets triggered on a bad coin.

Can't lie that it didn't make me money during the pump but it's a trash coin. He's just a triggered mongrel.

Yeah Orgy is quite a crybaby at times. Shits his pants if someone else has a different opinion or proved him wrong. That's why he has multiple asswipe awards. Ignore him, it's well known in the community how he acts Guys please, everyone is free to their own opinion, and just because you disagree with him doesn't mean you have to attack/insult him. BCH and BTC can coexist without having to fight. I'm saying this as a hardcore BTC supporter/developer.

With all due respect, have you not noticed how many times in the past week he called people "beyond retarded, stupids, idiots" etc? And it wasn't people who attacked him, it was people who simply disagreed with him.

Yes I have, but I've been having relatively technical and well thought out debates with him across various threads at the same time and he's been perfectly civil, which shows that if you are willing to be then he will be too. Of course if people are just throwing around things like "Bcash is a scam lolol dont buy BCH or jihan will steal your pension" then its perfectly fair to call them an idiot. I'd do the same if someone was going around calling bitcoin a ponzi scheme or something. Criticism without supporting facts doesn't warrant intelligent replies tbh

I didn't get a chance to quote you before the edit but basically just here to express my opinion. I just wanted a discussion on it really, nothing else.

Both are opinions and not facts. That's not how this topic is to be discussed.

A factual glance at BCH shows that it is a hard fork off Bitcoin and has an increased and scalable blocksize.

This doesn't seem like a basis to call it a shitcoin, does it? Another glance at it shows that miners, for a short period of time, switched to mining BCH, this probably triggered >regular users and investors< to change their behavior as well and they created their own pump-and-dump-like scenario without it really being that.

The support level for BCH doubled, that is the current conclusion of what recently happened.

That's not a basis either to call it a shitcoin, at all.

Orgy isn't the only person who believes in BCH. You should all actually be thanking him because he told you all to buy at 300$.

Correct.

Also I'm a believer in just holding your forked coins instead of selling them off for "free" money, in case stuff like this happens.

I added a few BCH to my collection just in case. ?

Are you on the BCH team, then, I saw that Rocketr was the first panel on their site?
why do you think he is trying that hard to pump bch? i remember when he was recommending rocketr to everyone acting like a customer just to admit few months later that he is the owner, he is very good at deceiving and manipulating users, he obviously doesn't have a objective view on the coin and is likely that he was involved and knew about the hole manipulation "btc is going to die switch to bch" scheme" that happen after segwit2 got canceled.Don't forget that this is the 3rd time bch got pumped and dumped since its existence and everytime btc pissed on it so far.I `m not saying that bch is a bad coin and don't invest in it, i`m saying taking advice from someone with direct connection to a coin is not very bright, research it in other places before you dump your btc for it and regret it later.

Yet the conversations between him and MeshCollider are the only decent technical discussions you can pull useful information from to decide for yourself what to do. Most other comments are subjective FUD such as "it's a shitcoin" without any elaboration. Orgy doesn't trade BCH nor does he mine it afaik, he holds it or pays things with it. Nor he on HF nor HF combined for that matter has an influence on BCH's value, no matter his stance or affiliation in regards to BCH.

There is no "BCH team" -- its a few different groups of developers. Though I am starting to weigh in on the ml and I help with a lot of BCH related projects.

Thanks man. Yeah I don't mine it (I'd like to eventually) nor do I trade it. I buy it and I don't sell it. I do use it to pay for things. And yeah, exactly: HFers aren't going to move the price at all lol. I'm just trying to give sound advice so people don't miss the bus. Advice being said, it seems GBTC is starting to dump their holdings so prepare for a bit of a drop for awhile. Thank fuck too cause I wanted to buy more BCH before it took off for good. I think now we've only got GBTC and the Coinbase user potential dump to worry about. Someone mentioned Bitmex too so maybe that. In a few months (quote me if you'd like) we'll be flying.

Of course nobody can really know what will happen but if ETH failed to overtake btc in june I highly doubt bch will be the one but who knows, most coins are better than btc and some coins are better than bch too but that doesn't dictate their market cap from what we can see. As someone who receives daily crypto payments i can tell you that 99% of them are btc and i'm pretty sure most can relate, every now and then I receive eth and for the last 5 days since i enabled bch payments from about 15-20 crypto payments ALL were btc. i'll start worrying about bch taking over btc when my crypto payments are at least 15% bch.

I've seen more people state that "coin X will never take over coin Y/BTC", than I see people actually say that they think a certain coin is going to take over another/BTC. I'd like to add the following to this: I believe a take-over is not fueled by people talking about, and fighting about which coin is better, but fueled by a completely natural shift in the market. ETH, BCH and BTC co-exist, that's how it is, and the market as a whole, consisting out of tens of thousands of consumers, traders and miners, will slowly but surely reposition their wealth when it is in their interest to do so. There can be numerous fights on HF on which coin is better, and numerous sharing of opinions on if and when coin X is going to replace coin Y, but at the end it doesn't matter how we try to convince or manipulate each other, the market keeps on trading on the background, with more influential capabilities than us.

You have to understand that you have to look relatively at it, and not in its absolute form. The total wealth of the HF users that are active in the BCH-related threads or lurk it, and have adjusted their trading based on it, is realistically speaking nothing compared to the wealth both large mining pools and 'whales' or large investors have. The BCH volume that was traded during its peak rise and fall was over $30 billion, HF would probably not even be responsible for $1 million of that.
