Well I've seen hundreds of results on Google of innocent people getting "6-8 BTC" locked in Bittrex for no reason. I want my 0.15834172 Bitcoin Cash that I paid for. This is a new account under a new IP. I've only had 2 accounts there in my entire lifetime, this one I made a few days ago and one that I made in early 2017. My IP has changed about 20+ times since early 2017 so there is no link between the new and the old account, that is 100% irrelevant. I made the Bittrex account the day that I created this thread trying to withdraw my Bitcoin Cash that I got in exchange for my Bitcoin.

I don't think I put any real info on the old account because I think the First/Last name and other information is a new feature. I don't remember doing it at all.

I know how to delete internet cookies, cache, I deleted # of fonts, deleted flash cookies, and I changed my IP dozens of time since then. Trust me this new account will not be traced because I deleted all history numerous times, and I have a totally new IP address (changed many times) from when I had my old account in early 2017. Unless they have my name they won't ever trace me to that account in early 2017 which I highly doubt because I don't think I have entered it in the old account. It's a new feature.

On-topic: So now that I have entered the fake information when applying for Basic Verification, they have locked me out and won't let me change the fake information that I put.

So now I can't even change the fake information to real information. (Yes, I know. I've sent them a ticket asking for help and a 2nd chance).

But my question is... Let's say right now I apply for Enhanced Verification, and I upload my real photo ID/license and take a fresh selfie. Do you think they will verify my account? Or will I get in trouble for putting fake bogus information in the Basic Verification, and have my Bittrex account locked forever? I didn't know that they were going to lock the fake info in, I thought it could be changeable and not that serious. I just wanted to withdraw the Bitcoin Cash at the time.

Does anyone have experience with this and know what I can do to withdraw my funds? I've sent them a new message inside of my ticket that I've opened in Bittrex Support. No response from them yet. Read it here (Click to View)

Are they asking any IDs? if they limit your account and can't verify your funds can get stuck

captcha2 - November 13, 2017, 4:33 pm

They are asking for IDs :/

sunriseangel - November 13, 2017, 4:45 pm

You can't use fake info as they check public records and if they don't find your info they'll ask for ID

You'll have to show your real info if youre wanting the funds back? I don't see a way you can get it activated beside that.
Hopefully someone else can help you!

Bittrex is such a scam for doing this. I just lost al of my BTC/Bitcoin Cash

They probably won't reply to my ticket if they stole 5K from you

It's technically not stolen yet, I just cant withdraw. My real info wouldn't work for basic verification and they denied my enhanced using a health-card.

I'm going to try enhanced again with my passport when it arrives.

August 1st of 2017 - Any account created before that date but is still unverified has a 0.025 BTC withdrawal limit per day.

OMG

Looks like I lost my 0.03666562 BTC which i used to buy (fees included) 0.15834172 Bitcoin Cash which is now stuck in Bittrex because of their new policy.

All I have to say now is i hope they don't penalize me and lock me in forever because i lied and used fake info from FakeNameGenerator.com

I used a Fake First, Last name, DOB, address, city, zip code, last 4 digits of social, everything. I hope they let me fix it... My ticket is still open and no one replied yet.

I guess we all can learn from my mistake here on HF

Exchange sites cannot be trusted they will lock your brand new account for putting fake info and they won't let you change the fake info.

I Google'd Bittrex and turns out they've locked thousands of innocent users' accounts and are holding millions of dollars in crypto currency and not giving them back. BITTREX.COM IS A SCAM basically

Or maybe they'll have some mercy on me and allow me to get a second chance to put my real info.

Also, they never told me that i had to verify my account to withdraw funds (for accounts created after August 2017) that's shady. The site is a SCAM thousands have lost millions $ on the site. Do research on it. Stay away from Bittrex. Google "Bittrex scams" and you will see , it's not security, they're stealing peoples money on purpose and will never give it back. I hope they can sort you out. I don't buy the scam thing, why would they cherry pick who they scam and why with such small amounts. If they truly did go around shamelessly scamming people they would have a really bad rep and people would flock the alternatives. I could see the majority of these "scams" being the fault of the users themselves but who knows.

Personally I have had a positive experience with them, they made my account enhanced within 5 minutes of applying.

$ZEUS - November 14, 2017, 7:55 pm

So you just happen to accidentally put the wrong info, and then proceed to accidentally click submit?

Beyond the fact that all you've done is straight up lied to them twice now (when you've already been caught red handed), final decision is up to them. Technically, no, they could say you are a hacker who got into this guy's account and is trying to withdraw his funds. While at the last few sentences you did come out and say you're not Timothy, nor a resident of Texas, it's still a 50/50 shot.

With that said, your other accounts also come into play, you said you've had two accounts. Assuming you entered real info on last, they'll see the similarity between this new one and old, regardless of how many ever IP changes you have.

BTW, financial websites rarely go off of just IP. They go off of cookies and geo data, and the geo data is what bites 90% of people in the ass.

On a final note, keep in mind they are under no obligation whatsoever to give you your money. In fact, they are taking a risk of you being a hacker by doing so. Do not rant nor get angry when they respond and decline if they so choose to do so.

I'd usually tell you to switch to another exchange, however being a NY resident that'd be rather hard for someone such as yourself due to BitLicense.

Although I understand you seek help to resolve your issue, and some have probably already said what I'm going to say one way or another: You broke the terms of service and linked funds to an identity that is not you. What would a bank do

Using fake information in the financial world could be considered distancing yourself from those funds, throwing them into the void, not taking credit for it.

They've been locking accounts without verified information for quite sometime now- I don't know why you think you'd be an exception

It'll scan for the username and try to identify it. If nothing is found, it'll be cancelled.

Pay someone in GFX section to modify some sort of ID and you're good.

Fake ID's are against HF rules.

We recommend you take the time to read the HF Help Documents section. The answer to your questions should be contained in there.

Is there any chance that they will allow me to edit the fake info that I put? After all, I sent them that message in the support ticket.

Why the fuck are you telling me to read the Help Docs.

I was the one who warned you.

Tf.

I'm not helping you anymore.

Edit: I hope you lose every penny.

Anyhow, I'll be waiting for a response from Bittrex to my support ticket. It could take weeks but I'll update my thread with the details.

See you later.

I honestly can't tell if you're trolling anymore tbh.

You are asking about covering up fraudulent behaviour.

Why do people get upset when they open "financial" accounts with fake info then get locked out of them?

Be it Bittrex or PayPal, what exactly did you expect?

Are people really that dense?

It seems this user is indeed quite that dense.

You made a fake account, put real money on there, and then blame Bittrex for running this "scam" when you tried to cashout... You then made a support ticket with blatant lies in it. "Accidentally put in the wrong info", Attempting to tell them that you don't know your own name and information probably put them off and I'll bet it will never be answered OR put into a low priority queue. Good luck I guess.

Bombaclut - November 15, 2017, 1:44 pm

Bittrex are actually very nice and helpful.

I put in around $40 to DASH in July, forgot about it, came back a month later and saw I needed ID, uploaded that and went on with my day.

I checked three months later and I'm unlocked with $170.

Shame OP will lose all his money.

This is probably the most autistic thing I've come across in a while. How did you not know that Bittrex requires basic identification to verify the integrity of the information associated with the account? It's literally plastered in your settings.

RIP YA $$ BOI

Finally something that we can agree on.

Moderators don't care apparently, I've reported it and nothing is happening lol
