

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Ban Infoproducts and all other "Get Rich Quick" Schemes in The Marketplace

Marko - November 16, 2017, 2:59 am

The Marketplace is filled with:

Make money guides.
Get rich quick guides.
GET RICH OR MONEY BACK!!!
MAKE MONEY - ONLY GUIDE THAT WORKS!!!

This is the cancer of HF, a digital tumor.

All of them are just rehashed crap, fake proofs, forced vouches and so on. Not sure if they still exist, but back in the day there was only an Ebook Bazaar and there were Reviewers and even they were still full of shit.

Banning infoproducts, trainings and get rich quick schemes will not only increase the quality of the forum, but it will prevent people from developing countries to not get scammed by these scammers.

Ice Poseidon - November 16, 2017, 3:01 am

These products contribute $$ to the forums with stickies etc and I don't see why omni would ban them. They are obviously shit no doubt.

Tides - November 16, 2017, 3:04 am

People just need to raise the bar on premium Ebooks, and give out these shitty paid 'methods' which if we're honest anyone could work out or find online given a bit of time for free. Giving decent content to members for free and charging for actual methods that are viable and unsaturated would be great.

Night Fury - November 16, 2017, 8:58 am

You can't expect the admin to take up the fight against human stupidity. Even if he devoted his entire life to that, he still may not be able to eradicate such a prevalent force.

Take this lesson away from a book that is centuries old: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

JustAnotherRandomDude - November 16, 2017, 9:24 am

None of the methods in ebooks I've bought from the marketplace have made me $0.01. I support banning the sale of eBooks.

mehtevas - November 16, 2017, 9:26 am

I agree, sadly no one will change anything about it. They make money for the forum, and the people make money.

I made a similar thread sometime ago about ebooks in the premium seller section.

Cyam - November 16, 2017, 11:44 am

How about you stop crying about that? I don't understand how you're bothered by e-Book sellers if you're not directly affected by it. You're smart, you know e-Books don't work - okay, so don't purchase them. Omni is making money by selling stickies for those e-Books you want to be disallowed. Do you understand how much money Omni would lose if he implemented your stupid idea?

Jesus, you people will never stop.

Also one more thing, no one is forcing anyone to purchase them so.

Camf ? - November 16, 2017, 11:49 am

(Nov 16, 2017 12:44 PM)Cyam Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How about you stop crying about that? I don't understand how you're bothered by e-Book sellers if you're not directly affected by it. You're smart, you know e-Books don't work - okay, so don't purchase them. Omni is making money by selling stickies for those e-Books you want to be disallowed. Do you understand how much money Omni would lose if he implemented your stupid idea?

Jesus, you people will never stop.

Also one more thing, no one is forcing anyone to purchase them so.

agreed with this. ? Noone is forcing anyone to buy them. Sadly there is two kinds of people, sheep and wolves. Can't get mad when the wolf get's hungry and puts out bait for the sheep.

Eagle 95 - November 16, 2017, 12:11 pm

Rule suggestions aren't allowed. Another thing is taking a normal approach such as: scan the thread for all the vouches, replies, to get the feel for seller's intentions, to search around the forums and the internet about the product, to check on-site reputation and scam reports. 99% of buyers don't do that.

Simply put, it's buyer's fault the situation is like what it is, not the sellers. Nobody is forcing anyone to buy anything here.

Omniscient - November 16, 2017, 12:24 pm

I'll make a deal with you. When Youtube bans Money Making videos I'll ban Money Making ebooks.