Don't take my recommendation to buy now. When this thread was posted, it was a good time to buy, but if you are reading this now, you are late.

i agree if i had any cash kicking about id buy in also. time for a loan me thinks..... :S

SIM-403479 - November 29, 2017, 11:57 am

I wouldn't recommend that right now.

Mech - November 29, 2017, 11:57 am

Bounced back from 8.6k to 10.2k in about 15 minutes.

EDIT; On GDAX

Same. Unfortunately, all my money is already tied up in stocks, Ether, and some other alt coins. It's cool, i'll just keep holding. It's already recovering quite a bit.

Not so sure if you should buy in now, but def. 15-20 mins ago, you should have.

To be fair, he could have also easily lost thousands right now if he bought from the time I posted to the time I'm posting again. Down $500 (about 5%) to 9.6k. It's extremely, extremely volatile right now.

EDIT; And up to 9.8 now, ha. See what I mean?

When it tanked to 8.6k-8.8k... It dropped way to quick, it was clearly going to at least bounce up slightly.

EDIT: BTC has always been super volatile btw.

I agree and saw the same pattern. I think Coinbase/GDAX being down helped deflate the price temporarily. Lots of money could have been made right there.

It was impossible to buy, Coinbase & Bitpanda was down. Only places I could purchase. And Cex.io is verifying my info, so couldn't purchase there...

List a few exchanges:

<https://localbitcoins.com>

<https://www.gdax.com>

<https://bittrex.com>

<https://poloniex.com>

<https://vircurex.com/>

<https://www.bitstamp.net/>

<https://www.bitfinex.com/>

<https://gemini.com/>

I always use 2-3 exchanges at a time.

Damn kit and I'm in the process of buying a BTC. Literally a gold mine right now

NonLeaf - November 29, 2017, 1:10 pm

If it ever hits back 8.2k$, buy.

It's still good to buy now if you're in it for the long run.

Bitcoim has been good to buy for the long run since it was created.
