Thread: BTC/crypto "knowledge" group \(min 1-5 BTC\)

FaberCastell - December 18, 2017, 5:05 pm

So yeah researching crypto takes quite a lot of time and i believe it's extremely useful if you share your ideas with others and if others pitch their ideas/vision/prediction to you as well.

So yeah, i was thinking about some kind of a grup where we could "brainstorm" together, to find uncovered alts/ico with great potentials(there are still gems waiting for the crowds), perhaps give input on the current market valuation, our strategies, etc...

The minimum to enter the group would be something like you have to have atleast like 1-5 Bitcoins(you don't pay anything, you just need a crypto portfolio worth atleast 1-5BTC) so we filter our the crypto noobies.

Would anyone be intrested? or is this dumb

Discord isn't allowed on the site so you'll have to find an alternative. Check out the stickied thread here.

Nuworld - December 18, 2017, 5:37 pm

I would not be taking about Discord if I was you.
I already seen a member get banned today for it.

FaberCastell - December 19, 2017, 7:49 am

Ok i didn't really mean discord. It doesn't matter actually

Having less than 1 BTC doesn't make you a crypto nooby but good luck with your group.

KOTOR - December 20, 2017, 7:05 am

Having 1-5 BTC makes you someone who has access to money, not someone who's knowledgable in BTC.

Orchid - December 20, 2017, 8:10 am how does having 1 btc or 20 btc make u good or bad at cryptos pls elaborate cuz lil pump gonna run into finacial trubbbbles sooner or l8tr cause he got a rolly on his wrist

FaberCastell - December 20, 2017, 8:46 am

Well those who have less than 1 btc have probably just recently gotten into these things...

Or they just sold years ago and don't have $16k to dump into crypto.

dump into crypto. I'm sure if they can show that they had a lot of money in crypto then that's fine.

Anyone who sold Bitcoin early though is obviously not too good with Crypto. xD

But I do get that owning Bitcoin doesn't define you, much better cryptos out there like Ethereum and Monero.

I have no idea wtf am I doing with cryptos but I can buy 5 BTC right now and I'd still have no idea what I'm doing. You'll have to find another way to filter out "noobies".

Yet you don't have 5 btc because you don't know what you're doing.

Most people that have money aren't going to purchase 5 btc to get into a group, most people knowledgeable on btc other coins have rode the 2,000-10,000% increase in the last year and could afford (if they don't have) at least 1 bitcoin, not because they're rich but because they're knowledgeable in cryptocurrency

Not saying how much btc you have means your more or less knowledgeable, but as a general rule of thumb it's pretty fucking good for I'd say 90% of hf.

Delusional believers that think its going to be at 100k by 2020

webdev77 - December 22, 2017, 9:07 am

I wouldn't even be interested in such a group. Amount of money does not determine whether you know what you are doing or not. There are smart people with little money and those with several bitcoin who know nothing at all. I also don't share my wallet addresses so I wouldn't want in.
