Thread: Litecoin founder Charlie Lee sold all his Litecoin

JELLY?IsH - December 20, 2017, 5:08 am

As you can see in the title. Also, here is original post from reddit

TLDR: He sold and donated his litecoins. But it's not over with litecoin of couse. He said: " I'm not quitting Litecoin. I will still spend all my time working on Litecoin. When Litecoin succeeds, I will still be rewarded in lots of different ways, just not directly via ownership of coins. I now believe this is the best way for me to continue to oversee Litecoin's growth. "

Bitcoin.com sells all his BTC

Litecoin founder sells all his LTC

What missing now? Ethereum founder sells all his ETH?

seems like they want to pump BCH seriously

Bitcoin.com people are Bitcoin Cash people. That big title of Bitcoin.com co-founder sold all his BTC for Bitcoin Cash, was to panic the public. In this case of Litecoin, it's obviously different.

Bitcoin.com guys were playing big game. But litecoin, it's just about conflict of interest

Probably not enough to crash the market.

If you even have to ask if it was a bad decision, you shouldn't be holding any litecoin.

Nobody knows what is going ti happen. But don't worry, I still believe it will grow in the future. I have 3 coins for now

FaberCastell - December 20, 2017, 7:01 am

I don't believe he actually sold the coins.

"If people thought I had a lot of crypto-assets I'd be very tempted to publicly state I sold them all, whether I did or not.

P.S. : I sold all of my crypto-assets."

You should do more research on the cryptocurrencies you invest in.
