His multi: <https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=2492457>

Ali L Deek

So look at this:

One of his first posts on hf was to ask for hash crack.

Now lets check another user who posted same hash to be cracked and got no where and also claimed he didnt know his way around hashcat.

His other account is still active just thought the community should be aware of a possible multi,

Biggy - December 28, 2017, 3:50 pm

So 2 people need the same hashes cracked and you assume he has both accounts?

You're a gigantic idiot.

Some people have way too much time on their hands, they start going dumb.

Effexion - December 28, 2017, 3:54 pm

My guessing is that they targeted the same site or it's a generic/commonly used pass.

Woods - December 28, 2017, 3:54 pm

Needing the same hash crack really isn't plausible grounds to accuse him of being a multi.

Just as an FYI these hashes have been around. Haven't done much research but I think a couple of people want this decrypted.

Nice one

Elitas - December 30, 2017, 8:32 am

What the hell, nobody even told me this existed lol?

I do recall me requesting help ages ago to have a specific database leaked (crom.co.uk) and these members helped me by giving me the EXACT link to get it.

This was the hashes for it, and another user evidently clicked the link and saw them too and wanted to have it cracked....

Here's the post for those curious: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5310342>.

If you follow the exact link, you'll then see the exact same 2 hashes as a result (unless their site has changed since then).

Not sure why you'd consider this proof of me being a multi at all, why would I post the same 2 hashes on 2 different accounts?

Elitas - December 30, 2017, 10:28 am

Lol you're that guy who keeps annoying me on different sites and that app we can't use anymore. xD

OT, very weird, not sure if it proves him being a multi but why would do people post 2 same hashes.
