Did Mr. Reviewer "expose" people on his main account? It's common practise these days, if he didnt get banned (his multi did actually) I dont see nothing wrong with OP doing this. There should be a handful of people closed by now though.

Other than that, I'm not sure who started all this bumping shit with fake accounts but it's happening every day and more and more people are getting involved. Seems as if every purchase in the marketplace these days is faked lol.

It's not payed and will never be, I didnt bother taking screenshot though but OP was quick enough to replace it with Email. It's obvious he didnt receive the template to post cause order was never processed hence file was never delivered, he could not know what to post unless order went through.

I guess you're correct in a way, just because whoever posted this made new account, it doesn't mean it's not true. OP + Hawkeye's post = ?

Mr. Reviewer - January 7, 2018, 9:00 am most of them don't buy through rocketr because they pay through Cryptocurrency (rocketr takes 5% so I avoid these fees)don't want the l33t upgrade, therefore I tell them to post an order id inside the sales thread so they can confirm the fact they buy without

Despite this thread, I'll continue telling my buyers to post order id's if they contact me and don't want L33T or want to pay through cryptocurrency

Nobody cares that's the whole point. One simply dont have time, at least I dont. We both know it's 50+ marketplace users, if Omni doesnt care I feel we shouldnt either. Sure it's abuse but it's clearly allowed since it's been going around for months now.

Common is out of equation. First thing he did 1 min after sign up is comment on a thread, 20 seconds later he posts here. The ability of human being to process the information in this thread + make a constructive reply regardless of its content is FUCKING IMPOSSIBLE in less than 2-3 minutes, let alone 20 seconds. The fact that you made a thread "exposing" others, and then continued to generate fake vouches on your own sales thread is what disgusts me.

You can't just hide the fact that you purposefully generated fake vouches for your thread by pointing fingers at others. You're also in the wrong, along with anyone else who does this.

Here are more fake accounts he used today. All of them joined today. He used 3. Notice how nobody has an upgrade. Also how the accounts aren't putting the order id's anymore. I wouldn't be surprised if he actually upgraded the accounts this time just to make himself look legit.

It's pretty obvious what Mr. Reviewers intentions were from the start.

> Makes everyone think he's legit

- > Come out with an ebook and have people vouch on how legit he his
- > Use fake accounts to make it seem like he gets sales

(Jan 7, 2018 11:49 PM)nanohits Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) And the worst thing is Vouch copies. Have you ever seen a vouch copy where they thrashed it for what it is? I doubt you will find any. And then based on that you go buy it and it's like this is shit! But it's too late already lost money. Every vouch copy I have seen are glowing.

Well I'm doing reviews from time to time and 3 cases can happen :

- The ebook is neither a gold mine neither shitty, it's right in the middle. You could make money but it's not sure. It can be because of saturated methods or what I call the "Creativity ebooks" where the writer gives you an idea but it's up to you to make it unique and profit out of the methods.

Let's face it, most of the time you won't make money with them. (Most frequent case)

- The ebook is actually pretty good, it makes you money but become saturated cause of the few vouch copies or the few sales made. I can take the example of "The PlugsOfAllTrade". Ebook made me money but if you came after me or like 3 guys after me, you couldn't follow just the ebook and were transferred to the first category.

You also have ebooks that work always whatever the saturation but most of the time they bring low profit. I can think of Bitcoin Xplosion for this example. (Rarest case)

- The ebook is shittiest of shittiest ebooks ever made. You post your review. Guy neg rep you and report you for sales trashing. If you are lucky the writer ask you kindly to remove your review because "they gonna do an update" and you never see them again in the marketplace. (middle case)

There is also a problem with the fast reviews. If you(the writers) were actually interested in the review we were posting, you would allow us (The reviewers) to actually take our time to write it and add proof of earning if any. Instead, they all want their reviews like 5 minutes after they sent you their books, so obviously you didn't have the time to review it properly.

On the other side, reviews are also to blame cause 95% of them are not constructive. You can't decently review an ebook without finding a problem somewhere and not being able to propose suggestions and improvements to it.

Finally, buyers are also to blame cause they don't make a minimum of research on the seller or on the people who vouched for it. Most of the ebooks where you see a shit ton of people just saying

"Vouch for my buddy, he only provides HQ stuff", you know it's gonna be bad from the start. After a few months on HF, you won't get tricked again (hopefully) but newcomers will get trapped in these cause they are not used to it and that's a shame. Some sellers are aiming specifically at the new people.

You will probably find a better way to make money by your own overall. Just put in your head that nobody would sell a working method just to make 30$/sales extra . If the method works, you make those 30$ in 1 or 2 hours maybe.

Hopefully, reviewers will step up a bit their reviews, sellers will allow more time to reviewers so they can provide better article and buyers will do more research. I'm not pretending to know everything obviously but that's my personal experience lol

Why would they do that? It's not like Reviewer made 3 accounts and bumped with them, he makes 5+ accounts every day and no one is doing anything about it. Because that's not how you catch multi accounts? For all we know someone might be trying to set him up, it's not solid evidence and can not be used as one. That's the whole point of "staff doesnt get involved", sure an exception or two were made during the years I've been here but still... I'm sure you've seen members opening fake disputes for currency exchanges, people slandering one another left to right, rarely they would act and delete it or even consider doing anything about it. That's HF, that was HF back in 2010 and it will continue to operate that way.

When you think about it, it's better to have kids run the block rather than get involved and end up being blamed for "incorrect" decision. There aint no police.

Everyone is going after him, not just ebook sellers. Especially Armada, who dislikes ebooks himself. You might want to read the last 20 (?) pages and you'll realize why is everyone against him.

 1. Rocketr takes a fee and is currently very slow for paying out due to high network traffic. Now he instantly receives balance without the risk of timing the transaction out.
 2. Read 3.
 3. That way he can keep control of his customers, now he can see which book strings to which order id or vice versa.

Both seems normal accounts with 0 prestige and 0 rep... Even if I'm mistaken, it's still not an excuse to use different product in order to show sales for something entirely different. As I said, you're not far away from being called out for exactly the same thing, regardless if accounts are fake or not, the end goal is the same. We'll just leave it at this, I dont care but I aint no blind.

Not sure why people played in to the ploy so well honestly speaking.
I threw my shit at his "crew" more or less because I did not give one flying fuck if they got the content or not.
I wanted to see shit play out. Plain and simple.
