Thread: Buying "0.00000001" value coins. \(Investing \$10,000\)

swavy - January 11, 2018, 6:49 pm

You can't can't get any lower than this so worst thing that can happen is the volume is too low and selling becomes difficult. But then it's only a matter of time for some random pump group to come along and decide hmm this one...

As I said in the title, I'm investing $10000 into this. $100 in 100 different shitcoins.

I've decided that typically, going off of other comparable coins (B3, SIC, ESP, ect) most of the time they get pumped between 15x - 50x. Depending on the coin, I'm going to put buy orders at 1, and sell orders at 15-25.

B3, for example, has had it's ups and downs, most meaning it dips to 0.00000001 then goes up 30x+.

About a month ago I was holding $500 in ESP which I bought at 0.00000001, I then sold at 0.00000001 again because I was done waiting. Now look at the value, and what it peaked at... I purchased in the middle of the 2 spikes. If I had held the coin and sold at 0.00000013 I would have made $6500 just for chilling and waiting.

I figure I can do this again, multiple times. If I put in $100 into 100 separate coins and set 15x sell orders, all I need is 5 of the 100 to be pumped to make up for the cost of the entire "project".

I'm expecting to wait ~1 month for at least 5 of the coins to be pumped. Which would mean I've doubled my investment..

Diversification!!!!

EDIT: Almost forgot, I'm also holding $1000 in this coin which I bought at 10, selling this one right now to get more money to buy other smaller coins. Not some sort of flexing shit, not everything is a fucking flexing thread. It's just "proof" this has the potential to work... Look at the peaks, both up and down.

Technically with this you can't "lose" any money. You may get stuck with a coin you don't want though.

The price of B3 wasn't correct when it got "pumped" to 0.02. Yobit isn't on the correct chain and caused CMC to display the incorrect price

I appreciate you mentioning this.

Still regardless, the other examples apply.

You should hold it for the long term though. It's gonna be good in 6 months-1 year ?

To diversify means to split your money.

I'm buying 100 different coins meaning it's a huge split. It may be "gambling" but through my eyes the odds are in my favor.

B3 is honestly the last coin I would expect to be good...

This is a terrible idea, unless you believe in the technology. Also setting 100x sell orders is annoying to manage.

Doubling up on an established coin takes ages to do. This has the potential to do it wayyy faster.

I'm fine with the time it will take with the potential it holds.

You can tell me if you want, if not it's all good.

It won't change what I plan to do here.

I'm obviously not paying that.

TittySauce - January 11, 2018, 8:03 pm where can I even find a coin currently worth .00000001 it seems harder to find those than any other in existence. I sure wish they'd pump VPRC one good time.. I have like 7k on that from mining

The Godfather - January 11, 2018, 8:05 pm

I've actually got 1 coin that's 1 satoshi and is a promising long term hold...

will drop 1k in and forget

Designer - January 11, 2018, 8:08 pm

So basically you're gambling.

thrudda - January 11, 2018, 8:52 pm

You might want to look into marketcaps instead of the price of the coin

GrandpaSherman - January 11, 2018, 9:35 pm

I just cant seem to find the markets for these coins. PAC on cryptopia is the only 1 sat coin I can find

Yeah, the odds are s ure in your favor and I'm doing the same with lowcaps with an active team/development.

Note that some coins trade with Doge as well as BTC. So although the 1 sat price may seem low, it may have an even lower value with Doge. ex: Sprouts

AMAVI - January 12, 2018, 2:33 pm

Look into HTML coin, it could be a coin that could be what you're looking for, really low in value but it should boom sometime soon, few friends dropped like 1- 2K onto it.
