Thread: Aeonhack's Video Tutorials

Aeonhack Archivist - January 14, 2018, 1:49 pm

Good Day HF!

It has been a while since I popped on here, but I have been spending some time trawling through more old hard drives and backups and such and came across several of Aeonhack's video tutorials. I had posted his VB.NET networking tutorials on my website, <https://www.aeonhack.com> but I have slacked on updating that, and I am truly sorry for that. I will be updating it this week.

In the mean time, I have uploaded the tutorials that I got Aeon's permission to re-upload. So without further ado, here are the videos:

Themebase Setup

How To Safely Terminate Threads

RXOR Encryption/Decryption Algorithm

GDI Graphics Paths

Maze Game

Custom Graph Control

And just for fun, here is Aeon's ALS Challenge Video

If I come across any more videos I will post them as well.

Aeon and I have a few new things in the works and I hope that we make enough progress in the coming months to start showing things off to you all!

Regards,

Alec

Thanks for the post.

Of course! I was happy when I was going through a few drive images that I had created and saw that it was in the archive.

Yes, it is a website that I have been running for quite some time now. It has gone through a few iterations, the first being launched in early 2014. There are many updates I need to upload to the site including several more court documents, update the videos page, and upload a few more sources.

I know this site for quite some time. Final verdict will be in February right? Would be cool if you update us on that.

I take it he's being charged for some form of hacking charges because of his RAT, In my opinion he was an absolute fool what did he think would come of it. If you play with fire you get burnt.

I remember way back when he started on that project I knew it was going to end badly.

From what I know, the involvement of his NetSeal on Limitless Keylogger was the reason behind of all this event.

Pretty sure that NetSeal was the major culprit. Of course NanoCore didn't help, but he actively aided in helping RAT owners license their software and even giving special discounts. You can read more of it on the site, it is pretty interesting.

I don't see how me uploading them to Github would make it any different (because in the end, I'm just some internet stranger regardless)? A few years back I did have them uploaded to Github. I will see about re-adding them all to Github at some point.

Github is useful. People can collaborate on the project, mark issues and solutions, etc.

Oh no, I get how useful Github is. But for the purpose of archival, I don't think it really suites my needs, because the intent of the projects I've uploaded to the site is that they are in their original form, without modifications.

For archival purposes Github is still fine for the same reasons. I get where you are coming from, though. Imo it is fine to just leave it as it is.

Thanks for bringing that to my attention. I am not sure why the audio was stripped, but I'll see about uploading a fresh copy when I am able to spend some time at home and not my place of work (which is sadly consuming my life at the moment).

Quick Edit:

I have received numerous requests to upload several snippets and projects that are seemingly "missing" from the archive. If any of you have followed me and my site for the past several years, you may notice that some of the projects are gone including InfinityBinder (which included the basics of what inspired NetSeal) and Grandeu's source code. I still have the files and don't plan to delete them ever. But I have been asked by Taylor that for the time being, that I keep them private to protect myself from any possible legal repercussions.

Thank you all for your support and understanding! If any of you have anything that you would like to contribute to the archive, please hit me up and I'll get back to you as soon as possible!

Edit #2:

Just opened up a Github and created a repo of the source codes as requested by a few people:

I have considered it, but I run this website out of passion and don't want to take away from what Taylor gave us. Almost feels wrong as he is the one that would deserve every penny that would get donated.

EDIT:

Still looking for another copy of the Custom Graph Control video. I honestly don't know why it doesn't have audio (checked my local copy as well). Guess I'll have to start searching through more archives.

I can appreciate and understand that. For me, he has been a long time friend and in my opinion, a strong figure in showcasing what is possible with VB. I know there are many others out there as well. Just thought I'd share what I managed to collect throughout the years, as they proved to be invaluable learning resources and both Taylor and myself want to keep that going for the new comers.

Quick edit:

Would any body be interested in a reupload of a fairly large variety of other "classic" sources and projects (from various other users of HF) that have long since disappeared? If so, I'll see what I can do to throw together something somewhat organized.

I Had a look around, and all i can see from you is:

- 1) Post on every thread.
- 2) Never post's examples.
- 3) The few I have seen are not for this Forum.

Years of coding experience? Four years is not classed as experience. You minus repped me because I am more experienced in data parsing. I posted a helpful post that you could not accept. Matters not. Every forum has a member such as yourself. Too scared to post anything they have not googled for fear being wrong :)

One peek at your git hub and noticed instantly ToLower. I saw you mention your graduated from N course. So where did you learn to string.ToLower. I cannot imagine any course teaching you such a way. Courses in the last few years would be using at least 3.5 and above, o the most logical thing to do while not using regex to keep you happy would create an extension using CaseInsensitiveComparer.

You should never use ToUpper or ToLower for the sake of comparison.
StringComparison.CurrentCultureIgnoreCase. So what course taught you this?

makes me wonder did you ever really do a course.

I don't like Ninja either, but are we really going to argue about the amount of nanoseconds it takes to use .ToLower() vs StringComparison?

It's nothing to do with speed. Sigh. But I'm sure Ninja would have eventually found that on google. From a coder who must argue every post from a programmer with 22 years more experience, I'm shocked your course did not teach you basic's. Nicely ignored though.

The difference between you and me is, I am a coder. I want to help people. Do you care about thinking you look good by posting c# in a vb subforum posting Asynchronous Programming with Async and Await looks good? You ain't impressing no One, especially not me. What standard of help are you living by? Why should a member be subjected to a different language while posting in the subforum that suits them? Because it is about you, not them. I'm here to help new programmers. It's not about you, it's about teaching the basics. We start from the beginning.

Now this will be my last post too you for a few reasons. You're a fraud pretending you are qualified.

It's about the members here. You care only about yourself. I can spot it a mile off, you can find examples combined with the documentation. I will give you that. You have bypassed basics that build a strong fundamental ground to learn from. You lack this.

I would ask you for a screenshot of your qualifications. But probably to busy eating dominos. Yes, a member has just shown me loads of scam reports about you. You can not send a screenshot to a paying customer because you're eating Pizza?

You disgust me. You are not only lying to paying members, you lie to yourself. Theft. Urgh. Welcome to ignore. I know more then you will ever forget.

Do you care about thinking you look good by posting c# in a vb subforum posting Asynchronous Programming with Async and Await looks good? You ain't impressing no One, especially not me. What standard of help are you living by? Why should a member be subjected to a different language while posting in the subforum that suits them? Because it is about you, not them. I'm here to help new programmers. It's not about you, it's about teaching the basics. We start from the beginning.

Now this will be my last post too you for a few reasons. You're a fraud pretending you are qualified. It's about the members here. You care only about yourself. I can spot it a mile off, you can find examples combined with the documentation. I will give you that. You have bypassed basics that build a strong fundamental ground to learn from. You lack this.

I would ask you for a screenshot of your qualifications. But probably to busy eating dominos. Yes, a member has just shown me loads of scam reports about you. You can not send a screenshot to a paying customer because you're eating Pizza?

You disgust me. You are not only lying to paying members, you lie to yourself. Theft. Urgh. Welcome to ignore. I know more then you will ever forget.

All I can say is I LOVE how you put him in his place.

My respect for you SIR. ? ? ?

Ok seriously, I don't think you guys got the memo.

Have you guys read the thread title? It reads Tutorial Aeonhack's Video Tutorials. Whether you love or hate Ninja is irrelevant to anything that is mentioned in the OP, and should therefore not be discussed here. Rather, use the PM system or some other place to let all your rage out, if you must.

Please stay on topic.

From a coder who must argue every post from a programmer with 22 years more experience, I'm shocked your course did not teach you basic's. Nicely ignored though.

Im not going to argue with the guy who puts Regex over HTML parsers for HTML parsing... Also, I am not going to reply to your posts anymore because this section is getting flooded. Instead, like Washi said, if you want to argue, PM me. I am going to continue posting in this section and arguing with stupid people. I don't care if you think I am stupid. I am willing to admit mistakes where I make mistakes and accept corrections. So just accept it, or continue your arguing over PM, but don't think you will bully me away. I have had tons of PMs from tons of people supporting me in my arguments and discussions with but are too scared to say it publicly.

That was... maybe 3 years ago? I barely knew how to program then and he thought me a few things.

(Jan 28, 2018 06:11 PM)EdwardSn0wdent Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It's nothing to do with speed. Sigh. ... my point was that you should use a HTML parser like AngleSharp or HtmlAgilityPack for HTML and you are tearing me apart over it and suggesting Regex. I ask you to name a reason why.

Nicely ignored though. You sure love to take every opportunity to flaunt your experience. Also, I didn't know having more experience without backing up your arguments automatically made your argument valid. Nice to know. Just like with you, I ask you to tell me why to use Regex over the simplicity and speed of a HTML parser for HTML parsing, but you never told me why. You are the one ignoring me. But I guess that is fine as hating on me is the standard here. Also, hypocrisy is as well.

So, me posting about 'simple stuff' like async and await is not helping new programmers, but you are helping new programmers? I am confused here.

other party spews out their nonsense and hates on me and form an opinion.

Boy, I got this infamous (if that is the right word) because I called out the 'big names' on this forum and got hate for it. I love it, that everytime I started a discussion regarding a piece of code with a member it results in people hating on me, and NEVER, EVER in most recent times has someone proven me wrong that I can remember. I tell you that HTML parsers are better to use for HTML parsing, and you start to hate me. I ask Barret why he does a specific thing (calling ToString on an object passed as parameter for String.Format), and I get hate from multiple members (Barret and the leeches on his dick). Yet, out of both discussions, I haven't seen anyone come up with a valid argument. All I get is hate. :^) But that is cool.

This is the last post on the subject that I will post in a thread. Continue over PM if you want. But I guess you won't because you have taken the high road and choose to ignore me. Which is a perfect excuse for not backing up your argument. You are just like the rest. Once I corner you, you decide to back out with a pathetic excuse except proving your right. I am willing to admit when someone is right, though I rarely do because I rarely have to.

Aeonhack wanted me to let everybody know that a few days ago somebody created an account using his old handle and was impersonating him. Please ignore any such impersonators and reach out to me so I can try to clear up confusion. Thanks!

Isn't he in prison? How does he keep in contact?

He and I remained in contact through the entire ordeal and have plans for communicating while he is in.

Aeonhack Archivist - April 19, 2018, 9:02 pm

Sorry for bumping, but in case anybody is interested, I have updated the Aeonhack.com website (currently still in the works) and will be posting regular updates from Taylor. He has been mailing me letters every few days and if you want to contact him but don't want to pay for mail or anything, just use the contact form and I will forward the messages to him.

Thanks for all of your support!

I do apologize about that. The previous cert expired and I recently moved to a new server and haven't had the time to generate new certs for use.
