Daily thread bump! We added new servers to get better download/upload speed! Enjoy!

Dawn1337 - January 21, 2018, 7:04 pm

is it possible to use this for uploading images using php, and then returning them to my site? thanks.

Gallant - January 22, 2018, 4:02 am

Website is not SSL Secured... :| Why is that?

They do have an SSL cert. but some of their resources (scripts/images etc) are hosted on a non-ssl platform thus restricting the output on their <https://files.guru/> - so I suppose they are offering their http version in the meantime.

EDIT: PS OP, fix up your ref links: Eg. your stylesheets are hosted on http (http://files.guru/css_slide/upload.css), change it to https.

Yes you can.

Because if I want use SSL I must implement pearl module to handle encrypted connection with a front-end server and back-end server. I will do it in this week.

Well done on your website man. I have to say I don't like the design of the website, the overall seems pretty laggy and the UI isn't well aligned with images neither is the text in nav-bars. When clicking the upload button you could align the three buttons to center, move the star to the left of premium by about 10px minimum. This is just my opinion, but I would put the upload button bigger and optimize space with other stuff. The overall seems pretty clean but empty.

Hope you can tweak things and make it even better, good luck OP.

I will pass, thanks for the offer!

Changed wait time from 35 to 15 Sec.
We turn off captcha to see if we get better results.

BITCHLESS - February 21, 2018, 10:05 am

New PPD System and rates!

We've reduced the payment to $1 via PayPal

Files will be deleted after 60 days from the last download

All file sizes will be counted to PPD System

Now we are working under SSL

We have changed the captcha system. Captcha will now be easier and more friendly for users
