Yes , I am just alerting our HF folks to take the money out ?

Jesse Pinkman - January 16, 2018, 2:26 pm

I predicted this would go down as soon as the BTC market crashed. Same as the ponzi's of wallstret in 08.

FaberCastell - January 16, 2018, 3:03 pm

And how will they release your money? They will issue you their worthless bitconnect coins at rate of 360$ per BCC.

ahaha

matistop - January 16, 2018, 3:06 pm

Have the people now lost all their money of bitconnect?

ahaha

Lol it's $37 per coin now

GloryToBe - January 16, 2018, 3:11 pm

This is not surprising to be honest, it wouldn't make sense to give investors guarranteed profit lol

Kaleb - January 16, 2018, 3:14 pm

Yeah that's why I'm hesitant to hold anything on exchanges beyond like $20, but now a lot of the exchanges I use have withdrawal fees that aren't scaled out to the new price of the coins so it will be ridiculously expensive to withdraw with most coins aside from like one.

Bitconnect was a lending platform not an exchange. Dumbass.

Who the fuck does “insert roleplay action here” anyway?

thales - January 16, 2018, 3:17 pm

they're finally exiting their ponzi

tether n tron next

Ransomware - January 16, 2018, 3:17 pm

How do people not realised it's a ponzi? 99.8% of BCC value was 'exchanged' on the BitConnect website.. soon as website goes coin drops to 0.

You do all realize you will be getting BCC at the rate of $430 each, but trade price is now $40? You essentially tenth'd your money, nice job!
