

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Do you believe the educational system is broken?

mawrek - January 18, 2018, 1:55 am

Just answer with yes or no and why?

Honeybun - January 18, 2018, 1:58 am

If you judge a fish based on its ability to climb a tree, it'll go through its entire life thinking it's a fuckwit. The educational system needs to be based on the individual's needs, but they just don't have the manpower or time to do so.

+1 to homeschooling, but some kids thrive in an environment like public school. Just whatever works for the student.

kannickel - January 18, 2018, 2:01 am

yes because you only learn how to pass the test

SIM-3257834 - January 18, 2018, 2:14 am

No I think life itself is about trial and error. I didn't need school to file taxes, want to know why? Turbo tax does it for me for free. Apparently some people believe teens should be taught about money management and filling taxes. Well maybe if parents stop buying their kids shit and make them work part time at age 16 they'll earn those skills. School primary focus should be on next level education, not a whole semester of life skills. That's the parents and teen job to go out to learn those skills.