

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Asking for consent = Asking website what they encrypt their passwords with.

Mr. Robot - January 21, 2018, 8:12 am

Why is it now easier to ask random chicks you just meet for sex, than it is asking a website owner how they secure your details.

:S

N1l0c - January 21, 2018, 8:41 am

(Jan 21, 2018 09:12 AM)Mr. Robot Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why is it now easier to ask random chicks you just meet for sex, than it is asking a website owner how they secure your details.

:S

I guess many website owners don't even develop their sites on their own. They're using CMS, etc. and that's why they have no fking clue.

But I get what you mean and I'm also concerned.

JELLY?IsH - January 21, 2018, 8:45 am

Because they don't even know anything about back end of their websites. All they know is a content. But I guess contacting developer could be helpful.

Bossk - January 21, 2018, 9:12 am

wtf is the title really supposed to mean

Riggs - January 21, 2018, 9:14 am

(Jan 21, 2018 10:12 AM)Bossk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) wtf is the title really supposed to mean
That title feels deeper than a 10" penis during a rape insemination.