Does this send email every time a password is used in a corresponding browser? Or strokes like a keylogger?

(Feb 5, 2018 10:29 AM)zer0 c00l Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Does this send email every time a password is used in a corresponding browser? Or strokes like a keylogger?

It gathers the saved passwords from each browser/client and sends those via email, it can be installed to startup should you want it to run over an extended period of time.

Few questions before I buy,

1. Is it FUD? If not which crypters is this compatible with?
2. Is this attached to a single HWID once I start it?
3. Any updates planned?

Thanks

This is not FUD.

It can be attached to up to two devices. (HWID bound)

No current updates planned, if there is anything you'd like to see added let me know and we might just add it!

Can you advice best crypter for this because i have tried DataProtector, CyberSeal and none works with it.

Here is what pop's up when trying to run crypted file (<https://imgur.com/a/Fhqhf>)

If none are working then try asking the Crypter support for assistance, crypters will most likely corrupt the program because they do not keep the assemblies intact.

Virtual Machines should not be a problem. I don't believe NAT would be an issue either just as long as an SMTP connection can be made.

Email is the email you are sending from, receiver email is the email that will receive those emails. You can put the same one if you would like.

And my apologies about the support site, we've been having hosting issues.

Website has been transferred to new hosting! Support system should be completed by later today.

SIM-2875347 - May 14, 2018, 6:55 pm

Our website is back up and functional! We have switched to a newer faster host as well as switched over to HTTPS.

We are also working on a full knowledgebase/faq section on the site to help users with any troubleshooting they might need to do. Support is of course still available to all users.

Check out the website here - <https://ee-security.net/>

As for crypters, I don't have the budget to test all of them so I have no clue which ones work. As far as I know most do not work as they don't keep our programs assemblies intact.
