Thread: Are you allowed to sell blackhat eBooks?

Jimmie - January 24, 2018, 3:37 am

This probably isn't allowed but I see people selling them all the time can anyone confirm if this is allowed?

Riyu - January 24, 2018, 6:12 am

Well if it falls under any of these then no..

This would be considered disallowed. From the Help Docs - "That includes ebooks, threads, sigs, and Marketplace sections." It's only specified when talking about PIDs and Call-ins, but you can assume that advertising a BH method in an ebook falls under the same general category.

Feel free to read over Disallowed Blackhat Activity if you are unsure of anything else.

If you're unsure then it probably isn't allowed.

I wouldn't risk it, but you do you my friend. There are docs about "Disallowed Blackhat Activity".

ntoskrnl.exe - January 25, 2018, 2:24 pm

Just make it for "educational purposes only" and it will be automatically allowed. ?
Knowledge cannot be illegal. ?

Jake???????????????? - January 25, 2018, 2:54 pm just depends on how blackhat the method itself is if its against the rules than no, but obviously if not then ur good to go (Jan 25, 2018 03:49 PM)- Sam - Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Very vague considering people sell methods which they claim to be 'blackhat' yet they are completely legal to rack in those customers.

Sam nailed it, the term "blackhat" here is usually used in sales threads to try and boost numbers. If they were actually blackhat they would be banned (eventually).

- Quote:1. You are allowed to sell in this section paid or subscription based internet accounts.
2. Prices must be posted and on a per account basis with no minimum to buy.
3. No adult website accounts.
4. Thread creation restricted to Ub3r only.

5. No free account giveaways. Market sales only.
6. No account generators.
7. All accounts sold must be priced at a minimum of $1. Bulk sales should still equate to at least $1 per account.

Actually, you seem to make a valid point... If the user has the ability to have an account for which they can "generate" a non-free account that would be considered a generator.

I would report that post...in-fact, I did report that post. Great catch.

Yellows For a Titch - January 25, 2018, 8:35 pm

How is it not? It's a thread where the OP sells accounts to a website which they can then generate as many accounts as they like during a set time period. He is not selling the accounts himself, he is selling access to his website which will spit out accounts.

That sure sounds like a generator to me...

You can only "generate" one account at a time. Once that one account is dead then you generate another one as a "replacement"

Agree to disagree, I stand by my original report as what you just said I would consider a "generator" in my opinion.

A generator is something that would just start pumping out accounts. The thread you linked is more of like an automated delivery system.

Let's say you purchase this dudes service and you have an account for $3 dollars or whatever. You are able to generate MORE than 3 accounts for that service and this each account costs you less than $1...

If I purchased this service, what is stoping me from re-selling the accounts I generate in the NFA section and arbitraging the service?

I get what you guys are saying, it's an easy way for the owner to get customers replacement accounts...but its still a generator in my own personal opinion, and I stand by my report.

His plans only allow you to generate one account unless you purchase multiple plans on different accounts.

You're essentially paying for 1 month of "unlimited replacements" which is what sellers without this service do anyways....

Reselling wouldn't work either. You can't just request a replacement if the account still 100% works.

Maybe I fucked up by not actually purchasing his service. When an account goes "down", is the user able to generate a new account with "permission" from the site owner? I feel like generating a single account, copying the creds and generating another account claiming the first account was "not working" is a simple way to get multiple accounts from the same subscription.

But honestly, i have not purchased the service so maybe I am talking out of my ass.
